It all began some 400 years ago when Queen Isabella I of Castile and León and King Ferdinand V of Aragon united their kingdoms and officially called the new land Spain.

They aided Columbus on his voyages to the New World. Their children later sponsored another man who became world renowned for his explorations. His name—Francisco Vasquez de Coronado.

Coronado was a Spanish nobleman, a Don, who had great aspirations. He searched for the legendary Seven Cities of Cibola. The search led this man and his colleagues far across what is now the southwestern United States.

Starting on the Pacific coast of Mexico, Coronado's expedition travelled as far north as Kansas City. They were the first white men to see the Grand Canyon. They left their mark along the trail wherever they travelled.

Opening its doors in 1961, Coronado High School began a colorful future for all upcoming Dons. The first year there were no graduates to welcome back, so the Dons celebrated a "Spanish Holiday" in lieu of Homecoming.

The fight song and Coronado's hymn were written by band instructor Eugene Hanson. By the end of the year the 20 by 26 foot mosaic on the auditorium facade had been finished. Designed by art teacher Joseph Gatti, the mosaic depicts the fine arts, via more than 100,000 colorful one-inch squares of Venetian glass tile.

During the second year, 1962-63, the vinyl-coated Coronado crest was inlaid in the auditorium lobby.

Climaxing an extraordinary year, in 1963-64 the gymnastics team won its first championship.

In 1967-68 the Senior class repeated as "Class of the Year" and the Theatre Arts classes produced four one-act plays, and a major musical, "Guys and Dolls."

The 1969-70 school year saw the Dons as State Gymnastics Champs. Governor Jack Williams was on campus in the spring to proclaim Don Juan de Coronado day. The Senior Class presented a portrait of Principal Clyde Kidd as their class gift. New construction amounting to $1.3 million was begun in the spring as Coronado prepared to equip for 3,500 students by 1973. Fine Arts Department presented "Rhino" and "Carousel."

Coronado's eleventh year brought the faculty on stage to raise money for scholarships. They presented "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," and the result was $1,200 for student scholarships. All phases of the athletic program were outstanding, and Coronado teams gained the reputation as potential state contenders year in and year out. Amicae and Criada, two service clubs on campus, took to the football field to engage in a "Powder Puff" football game. Amicae won 19-8.

The thirteenth year of Coronado, 1973-74, marked Robert V. Hendricks' first year as Principal.

The energy crisis brought about some cold classrooms, and student council sponsored a "Conservoil Day," which resulted in very few cars in the parking lots. Los Hermanos was selected as "Club of the Year," and $2,000 in student scholarships was provided from the faculty's production of "Li'l Abner." Larry Halbert, journalism teacher, was chosen by the students as "Teacher of the Year."

In the Bicentennial year of 1975-76 all club constitutions were rewritten to insure that membership was not restricted on the basis of race, sex, or religion.

In 1976-77 the Varsity Football team became the AAA State Champions. Coach Ed Anderson retired as head football coach after sixteen years of coaching. The Cross Country team also came in as State Champs, and the band was rated Superior in state competition. A new trophy case was placed in the 200 building to display the accumulation of trophies over the past 16-year period.

1977-78 brought thirty members of the Arizona North Central Association to evaluate Coronado from Oct. 30 to Nov. 2. Dr. Howard Leigh from the University of Arizona was the chairperson of the NCA Committee, and Jerry Smith, business teacher, was Coronado chairperson of the Steering Committee. Coronado Thespians performed a pre-show at the first annual Shakespearean Festival at Scottsdale Center for the Arts, and the Fine Arts Department presented "Thousand Clowns" and "The King and I."

EVERYTHING

KNOW ABOUT ...

PEOPLE, PLACES & THINGS

"People who need people are the luckiest people in the world."

Barbra Steisand sang these words for us. Finding each other is what the campus life section is all about. It centers around us, the PEOPLE; the people on campus, in the valley, in the state and in the world. We create the events.

This section explains with pictures and words the PLACES we went and the THINGS we did from summer workshops to graduation, from Homecoming to proms, from the plays we act in to the concerts we enjoy. It's all a part of our campus life.

In this section we'll show you the biggest events of the past year, both national and local. We'll show you 1978, it's fads, its top news and how Coronado students achieved recognition. We'll bring you up to date with popular people of the times and history in the making.

There's something new this year. It's a touch of color. A section full of life and vigor deserves color, and so we've brought it to you. There are other effects, too. It's all to bring out the best of Coronado's lifestyle.

We know you'll enjoy learning Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About People, Places, & Things.

The Fine Arts Department has a reputation of being one of the best in the valley. The department introduced Repertory theatre into the school a few years ago, and has kept it up since.

Shakespeare and modern writers such as Sandy Wilson and Tom Stoppard were the playwrights of Repertory '78, which was presented in the round.

"The Boyfriend," written by Sandy Wilson, is the story of a young English girl, Polly, who attends a French Boarding School because her father wants her to be well-bred. Her father, Percival Browne, fears that every young man would want to date her because of his immense wealth; therefore, he forbids her to date. But the social event of the season, the costume Ball, is coming up and Polly doesn't have a date, so she pretends in front of the other girls at the boarding house that she has a boyfriend in Paris.

Madame Dubonnet, proprietor of the boarding house, is tempted to tell Polly's father, but when she meets him she realizes he is an old flame. Therefore, the Madame decides to get Polly a date for the ball through some friends on the beach.

In the meantime, Polly meets a French messenger boy, Tony. What she doesn't know is that he's the son of a wealthy Englishman, and has just run off from home to escape his parents' persecution. He thinks she's just the secretary of the boarding house and both of them are afraid to tell their true identity.

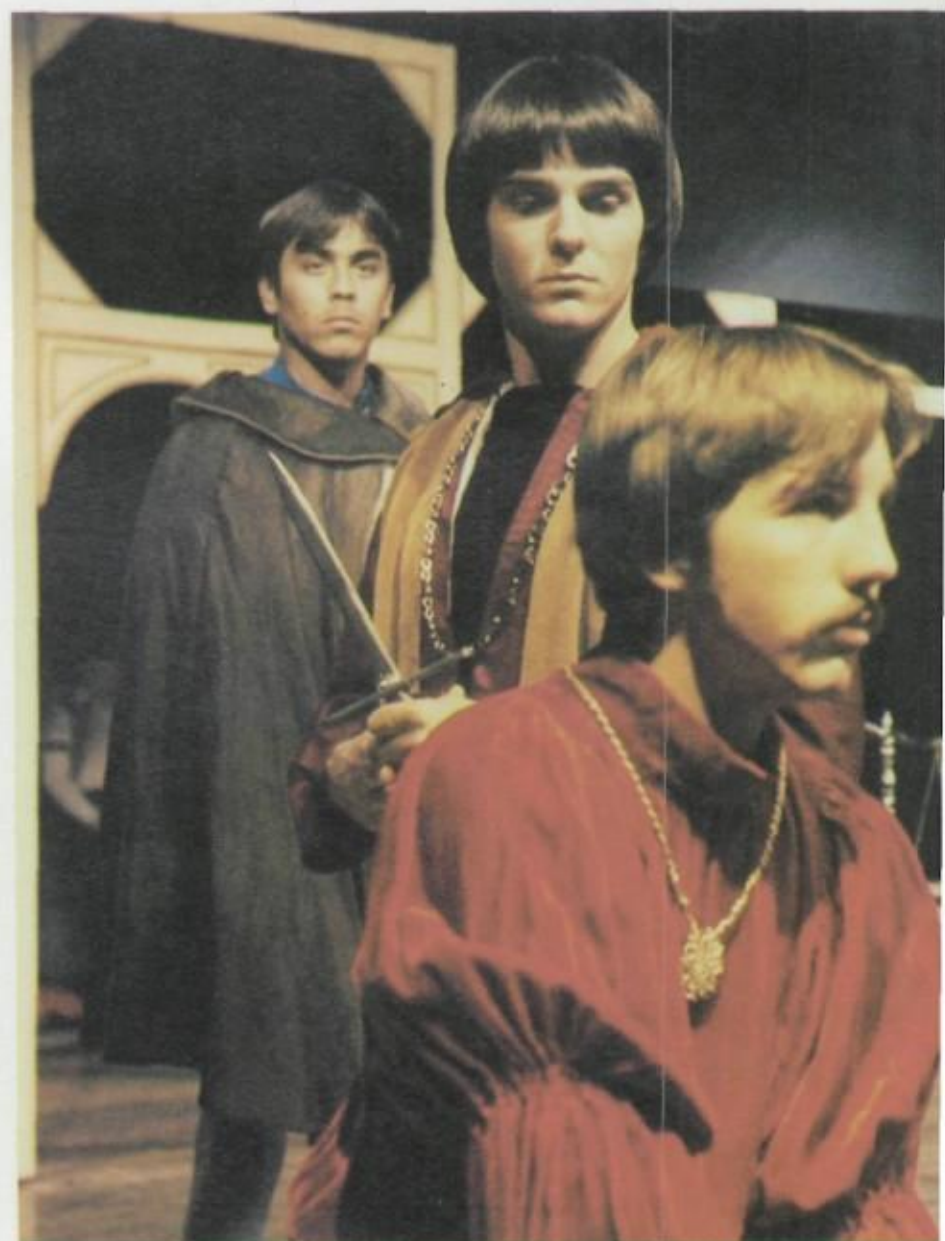

Tony agrees to meet Polly at the costume Ball and while there, sees his parents. Thinking they wouldn't approve, he leaves. Polly thinks he was just a thief trying to get her father's money. Realizing his love for Polly, Tony returns and tells his parents about Polly. The two find out each other's true identity and agree to wed. Meanwhile, Madame Dubonnet and Polly's father agree to a wedding, too, and the play ends happily. After Magritte. The play opens with the entry of the forceful inspector from Scotland Yard and his constable. The officers proceeded to place the family on stage under arrest (Harris, his wife and his mother). It is not clear why—something about a parked car, a bunch of 22 caliber shells in the wastebasket, and the robbery of the box office of a minstrel show. But Harris has an explanation—he had parked near an art gallery in order to let his mother see some paintings by Margritte. But then it develops that there was no minstrel show at all, and the plot goes haywire.

Merchant of Venice. Shylock the jew, lived in Venice and was a usurer who made immense fortunes by lending money to Christian merchants at great interest.

Bassanio needed money to ask his beloved Portia in the hand of marriage, and Antonio did not have it; but he knew his ships would soon arrive from the sea with many treasures. So, he went to Shylock to borrow money. Shylock took this chance to take advantage of Antonio, for they were never on agreeing terms. Shylock made a deal, in sport, Antonio thought; they signed a bond in front of a lawyer saying that if Antonio did not pay Shylock on the day agreed upon, Shylock could take a pound of flesh from Antonio.

On the day Bassanio proposed to Portia, a letter arrived saying Antonio's ships had failed to come.

Bassanio borrowed money from Portia to pay off Shylock. Shylock refused the money, insisting on the pound of flesh. Their argument was taken to court.

Meanwhile Portia, wanting to help her new husband and friend, poses as a lawyer and takes the case.

She flatters Shylock and procures the bond. After reading carefully, she notes that Shylock has the right to take the pound of flesh, but no blood. She proceeds to say that since he threatened a man's life, he should pay the state with his own. The Duke pardons him under the conditions that he pay half his earnings to the state and the other half to Antonio. Antonio gives his half to Shylock's daughter, who has been denounced for marrying a Christian. Portia reveals later that she was, in fact, the lawyer and gave Antonio some letters which contained an account of the ships that had arrived safely in the harbor.

The Real Inspector Hound. Two critics enter their box, one a substitute for the regular critic. Enter the countess and her girlfriend guest. But then, in a wheelchair, comes the crippled brother of the countess' dead husband from Australia. Inspector Hound arrives. Strange, because nobody called him. He stumbles on a body on stage (it's the first-string critic who has been missing). And the same things start to happen all over again. The substitute critic comes on stage to take the place of the inspector, and then the original inspector turns out to be the countess' long-lost husband.

ONE Graduate Jerry Ford, as Birdfoot, explains to junior Linda Gaare how he got on stage. The scene is from "The Boyfriend." Graduate Debbie Beshaw stands behind the wall in the background.

TWO Junior Patty Baker as Lady Brockhurst is an eccentric elderly woman in a scene from "The Boyfriend."

THREE '78 Graduate David Mayne as Simon releases his affections on Cynthia, played by graduate Kay Kirby.

FOUR Junior Craig Smith and senior Dierdra Hanson are shown in a scene from The Boyfriend.

The football field was transformed into an open-air theater for the 1978 graduation. The melodic strains of "Crown Imperial" filled the air as the Dons Symphonic Band played the coronation march.

The students in their red caps and gowns were highlighted by the lights of the field against the dark of the night. A capacity crowd of families and friends listened to the opening address delivered by classmate Brian Peach.

Senior president Sandra Neddermeyer welcomed the audience and Linda McCoy gave the commencement address.

Principal Robert Hendricks accepted the legacy of the class of '78, eight contemporary design stone benches. They were installed around the mall. School trustee Thomas Carey presented the diplomas to over 650 graduates.

"The Greatest Love of All" was sung by graduate Ken Goodenberger. Brad Anderson student body president gave the closing. With exuberance hundreds of red hats sailed into the night. Class of '78 was graduated.

Summer study extends throughout world

By Karyn d'Eon

Summer found Coronado students taking part in special learning activities. Experiences bordered on everything from music to media work, from politics to getting along with your neighbors.

The political scene was explored at Boys State and Girls State where the students held mock elections, campaigned for offices and elected candidates to senate. The senate proceeded to pass bills and enact legislation.

Boys State was held at the Northern Arizona University (NAU) early in June, while the University of Arizona (UofA) in Tucson was the site for Girls State.

Anytown is a brotherhood camp where students of various racial and religious backgrounds learn to relate to others. They involved themselves in discussion groups and evening programs.

Highlighting the 20th Annual Arizona Interscholastic Press Association (AIPA) workshop was the press conference with Governor Babbitt. The workshop for newspaper, yearbook, and photography students was held from June 17-28 at NAU.

Jeff Bridges from Coronado was the Layout Editor of the workshop literary magazine, Pine 'n Pen.

A large group of Coronado students descended on Carlsbad, California to attend Camp Pacific. Juana Fredrick and the Donettes were also on board. The session was from August 5-12. Approximately 70-80 students attended.

Two Coronado students, junior Dave Virden and '78 graduate Janelle Carr joined journalism advisor Gerri Fiedler on the "Europe '78: Exploring Cultural Roots" Tour. The tour travelled through France, England, Austria, Italy, and Germany.

A student's life isn't always easy . . .

Cartoon by Allan Gilbert Commercial Art Student, Scottsdale Vocational-Technical Center

Along with the joys of high school, there also come problems and sorrows. Some of the problems are very real at the moment, but may be lessened at another point in time.

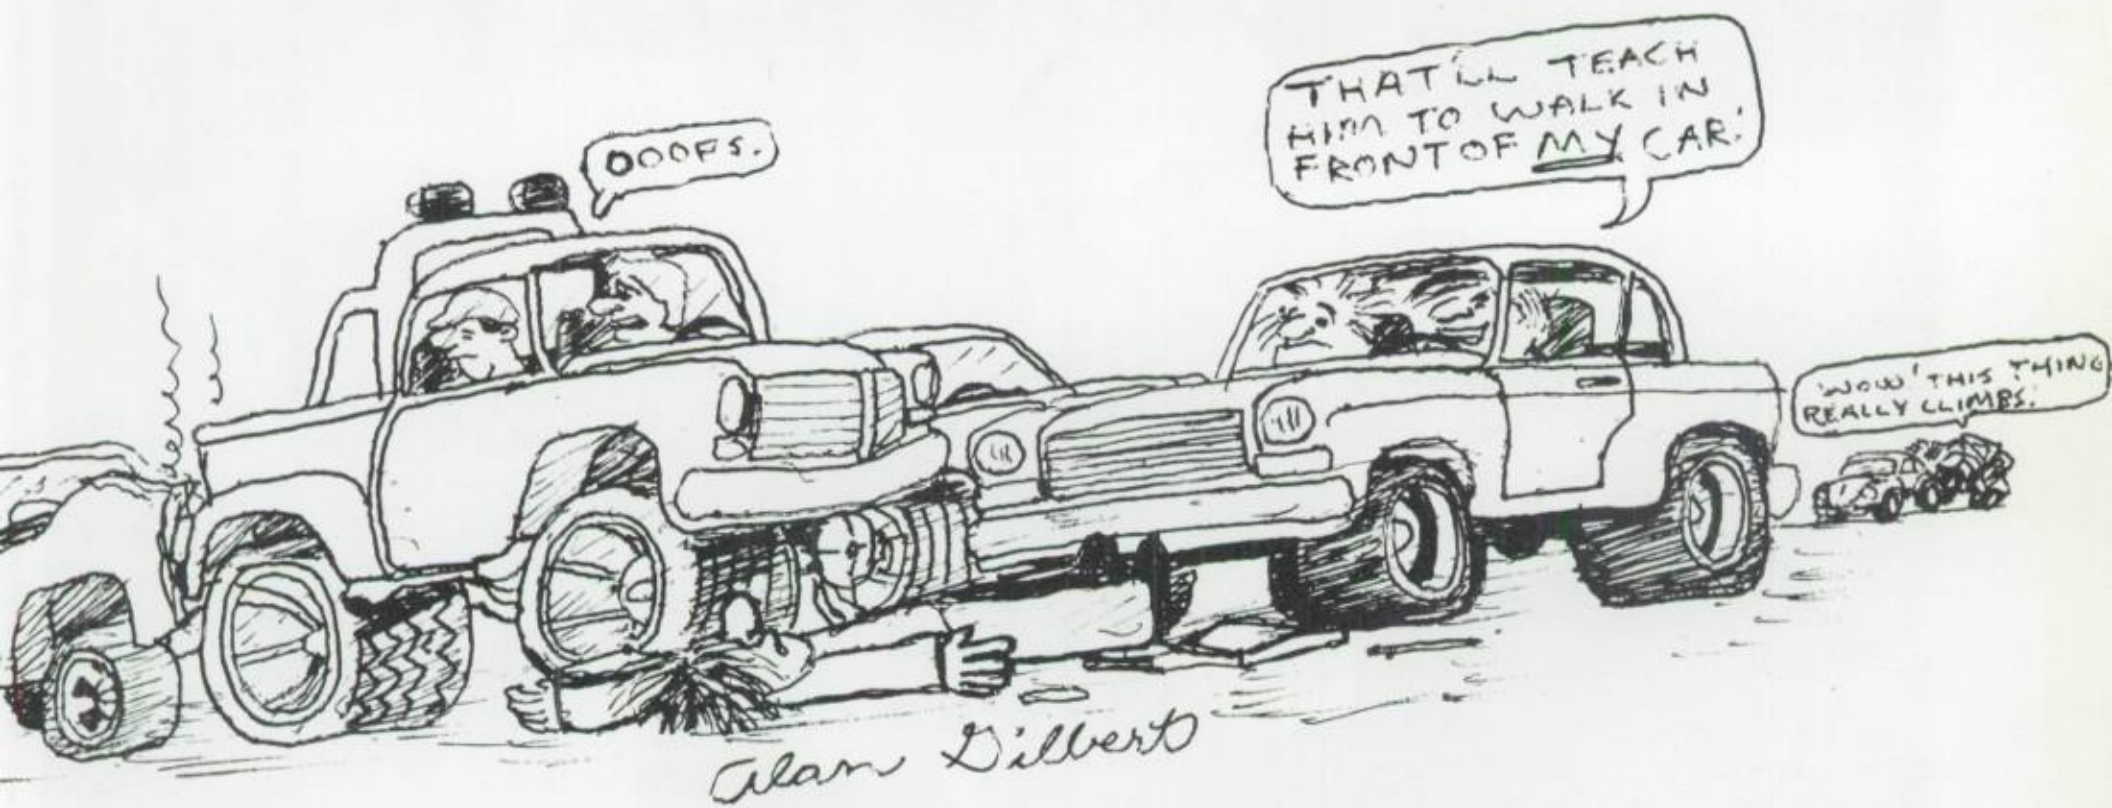

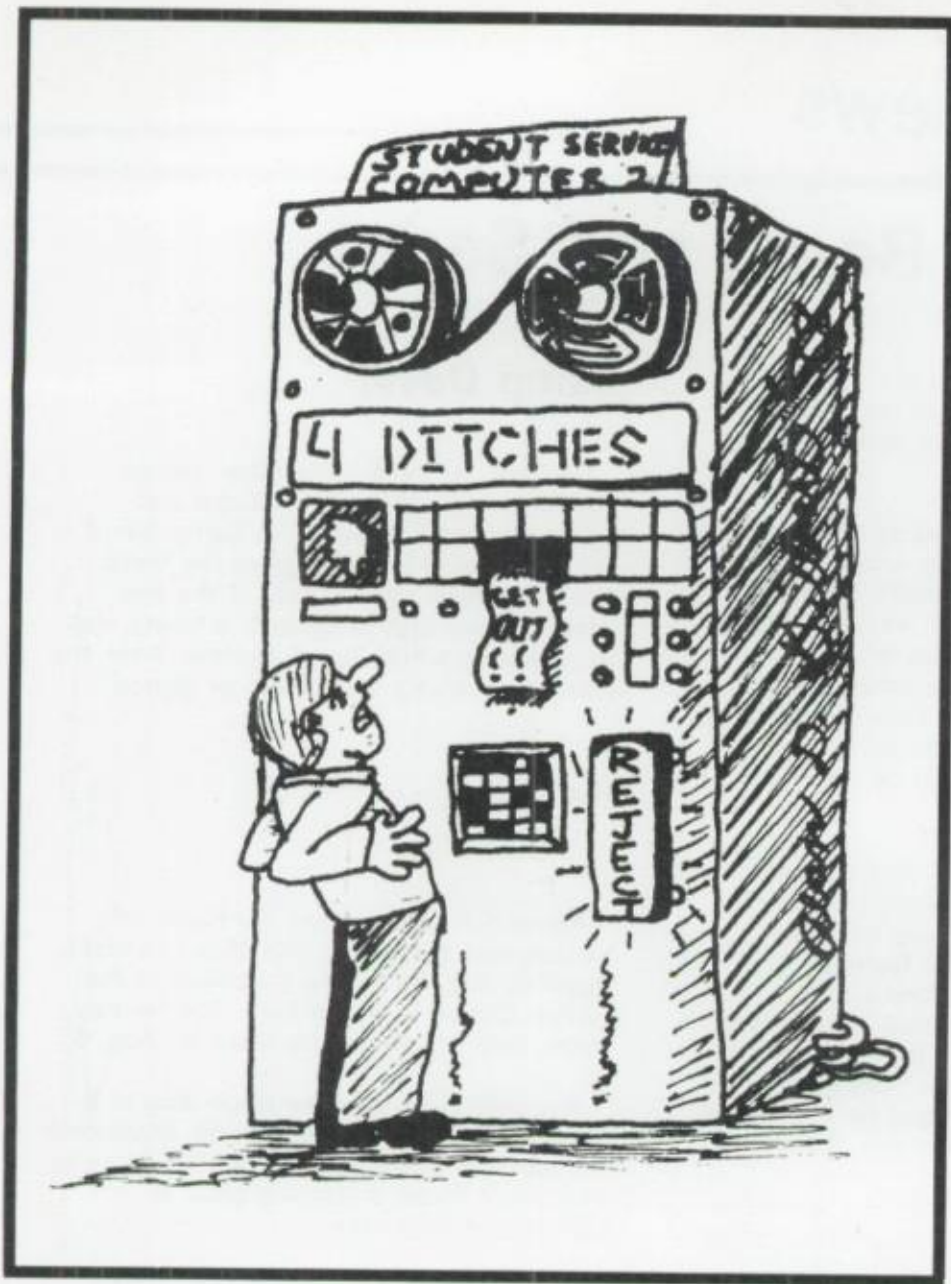

They are with most high schools in the current era; when they are solved, others will take their place.

Many solutions have been tried. Some have succeeded to an extent, others have failed.

Everyone has to admit these issues are with the schools, and they concern students, faculty, and administration.

But for a moment, take a look at the lighter side of the problems of US—the high school students of Coronado.

The Peoples' Republic

Midnight, December 31, 1978

Normalization became final between the U.S. and Red China. On this date, the American Embassy in Taiwan was abandoned.

Negotiations between Peking and Washington had been going on for some time. Carter had hoped that Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-p'ing would agree to let U.S. recognition of Taiwan continue. This did not happen. China insisted that the U.S. cut off diplomatic relations.

After 72 hours of exchange, Carter conceded. Teng agreed that Washington's defense treaty with Taiwan did not have to be abrogated until one year after normalization.

Few in Washington seemed to feel that the new relations would interfere with détente with Russia. Moreover, Washington's negotiations with Peking gave them fresh options in dealing with the Soviets. China also had its advantages. Premier Hau Kou-feng hoped that ties with the U.S. would persuade Vietnam, Moscow's ally, to stop its current invasion of Cambodia, Peking's ally.

Premier Hau announced the normalization agreement to his people at the precise moment Carter spoke in Washington.

TAIWAN: Not everyone was excited about the exchange. From Taipei, cries rang out against the American "traitors." Carter sells peanuts and friends," was a popular poster phrase. Said one Taiwanese official: "We don't understand you Americans. It seems that if you can kill Americans—like the Japanese, the Germans and the Chinese did—then you can be their friend."

The treaty that the U.S. had held with Taiwan for 24 years had ended. But the Taiwanese were not the only ones to protest. U.S. Rep. Senator Barry S. Goldwater of Arizona claimed Carter's actions were unconstitutional. He referred to it as a "cowardly act" that "stabs in the back the nation of Taiwan." Goldwater plans to take Carter to court for extracting the treaty without the consent of Congress.

On New Year's Eve, while the American flag was being dragged through the muddy streets of Taipei, Vice President Mondale was sipping champagne with Chinese Ambassador Chai Tse-min in Washington; Carter was in the Caribbean.

Camp David

On Sept. 6, 1978, President James Carter, Israel's Menachem Begin and Egypt's Anwar Sadat met at Camp David, MD. On Sept. 17, they signed the West Bank and Sinai agreements. If the two nations governments agreed, a treaty was to be signed within three months. After the summit no treaty was drawn or signed.

Religion

Albino Cardinal Luciani, Patriarch of Venice, was elected as the 263rd Catholic Pope on Aug. 26 by the Cardinals at the Sistine Chapel in Rome Italy. The former Pope, Paul VI, died in his sleep on Aug. 6.

A month later the New Pope died of a heart attack shocking the world. More over the election of the first non-Italian Pope in 450 years threw a startling blow at Catholics everywhere.

Poland's Karol Wojtyla, 58, chose the name of Pope John Paul II in honor of his predecessors.

Test Tube Baby

Lesly Brown of Oldham, England, is the first child born after being conceived outside the womb, in an complained of a blocked fallopian tube. The child was born on July 25, 1978.

Leon Spinks defeated Muhammed Ali in 15 rounds for the heavyweight boxing championship on Feb. 15, 1978 in Las Vegas, Nev., but the troubled Spinks was dethroned by Ali 241 days later in New Orleans, LA. The promoter said Spinks "was unable to accept the responsibility of the heavyweight championship."

New York baseball player Ron Guidry capped the season by winning the American League's Cy Young award. Guidry had the best record in the league, winning 25 games and losing three. He also posted a record of 248 strike outs in the '78 season.

The Double II embarked on its historic voyage carrying food and radio equipment, most of which had to be thrown overboard. Max Anderson, Ben Abruao, and Larry Newman landed safely in France Aug. 17. They had previously made three unsuccessful attempts.

Tragedies: cult suicide claims 912 lives

By Karyn d'Eon, Maureen McSpadden
Wide World Photos

The most horrible news story of 1978 was the report of the mass suicide of 912 American citizens in Georgetown, Guyana. Men, women and children of all ages were members of a cult called "The People's Temple" and had been living in South America for nearly two years.

The leaders of the cult was a man who called himself "Reverend" Jim Jones and claimed at first he was a messenger of God. Ultimately, he announced to his members that he was God himself. The Temple members obeyed him and gave to him all their material wealth.

Jones quickly amassed a fortune and came under investigation of various United States agencies. Representative Leo Ryan of California was asked by relatives of Temple members to check on the well-being of family members who they felt were being held against their will. Other reports were filtering to the media of torture and beatings. Rep. Ryan and a news team left for Guyana in November to check the reports.

On Nov. 18, upon completion of their investigation Rep. Ryan and two newsmen were brutally murdered at an airfield near the Jonestown compound.

After the murders, Jones ordered the cult members to drink a punch mix loaded with cyanide. Armed guards forced anyone who refused. Jones, himself, was found with a shot in the head.

Few people escaped the holocaust. Among those who did escape were some of the guards who participated in the mass murder. They may stand trial in the U.S.

The U.S. government paid to transport all the bodies of the victims to the United States but afterwards attempted to force the People's Temple to pay the cost.

Untold millions of the People's Temple are reputed to be in banks across the world in numbered accounts.

All this happened in a 'Civilized World' in 1978.

San Diego Crash

"Tower, we're going down. This is PSA." Pacific Southwest Airlines Captain James McFeron and 135 souls on board the 66-ton Boeing 727 jetliner were hurtling at 280 mph towards San Diego's residential North Park neighborhood.

Sept. 25, 1978 ... Kazy and Boswell, two experienced pilots, were flying a Cessna 172 on a training flight.

At 8:55 a.m. the Cessna pulled up from Runway 9 of Lindbergh Field.

PSA, now heading east, slowed to 170 mph, dropped landing gear and pulled the nose up slightly. The Cessna's radio could only receive Miramar Tower. Then came the following radio communications:

08:59:30. Miramar to PSA:

"Traffic 12 o'clock (dead ahead). One mile, northbound."

PSA: "We're looking."

08:59:40. Miramar to PSA:

"Additional traffic 12 o'clock 3 miles north of field, northeast-bound. Cessna 172 climbing out of 1400 (altitude in feet)"

PSA: "O.K. We got that one."

09:00:15. Miramar to PSA:

"Traffic 12 o'clock 3 miles out of 1700."

PSA: "Traffic in sight."

09:00:30. Miramar to Cessna:

"Traffic 6 o'clock (directly to rear of Cessna) 2 miles eastbound. PSA jet inbound to Linbergh out of 3200. Has you in sight."

Cessna: Response unintelligible.

09:00:40. Lindbergh to PSA:

"Traffic 12 o'clock one mile. A Cessna."

PSA: "O.K. We had him a minute ago."

Lindbergh: "Roger."

PSA: "I think he passed off to our right."

09:01:45. Miramar to Cessna:

"Traffic in your vicinity is a PSA jet. Has you in sight. He is descending toward Lindbergh."

Cessna: No response.

The planes had just collided.

The PSA plummeted to the earth killing all. The Cessna fell 6 blocks away, its occupants dead. 150 were killed in all.

The crash was the worst in U.S. aviation history and caused great controversy over having such a busy airport in a heavily populated area.

Prison controversy: Tison, Greenawalt escape causes commotion in legislature

By Jim Durkin

Gary Tison's body was found, hidden under a tree, on August 22, 1978, thus ending one of the biggest manhunts in the history of Arizona. Despite the massive search that followed his escape from prison, it was the desert that killed him. He had eluded all that the state of Arizona could throw at him.

It all started July 30, when Tison's sons; Donald, Raymond and Ricky smuggled several shotguns hidden in an ice chest into Tison and his fellow prisoner Randy Greenawalt. Heading west towards Yuma, they are believed to have killed four members of Marine Sgt. John Lyons' family. They then turned north to avoid capture. When in Colorado they stole a van from a Texas honeymooning couple. The couple was later found dead.

Reports said they were heading back towards the Phoenix area. This had Casa Grande residents barricading doors and getting their guns ready.

Just outside Casa Grande, the escapees ran into a police roadblock. In the ensuing shootout, Donald, 20, the oldest of Tison's sons, was killed, while Ricky, 18, Raymond 19, and Greenawalt, 29, were captured. The 42-year-old Tison headed for the mountains and watched the search from there.

He later came down in search of water and was killed by the desert heat. His body was found four days later by Ray Thomas, a few 100 feet away from the Papago Chemical Company where he was employed.

Prison Site Undecided

A very controversial story of the year was that of the proposed prison site. Government officials decided to construct a medium security prison in Litchfield Park, but residents claimed it was too close to residential areas and a nearby school.

The legislature originally planned to build one medium security prison for young male first offenders in Phoenix and another in Tucson, but that was voted down. It was argued that if only one institution was to be built, it should be in Florence, where the state's maximum security prison is already located.

More than 30 sites in Maricopa county were considered, but all were rejected because of stiff local resistance. For more than four years officials have been looking for a site inside the Phoenix area that was acceptable to local residents, but without success. The only place without local resistance was Tucson, but Litchfield Park was chosen anyway.

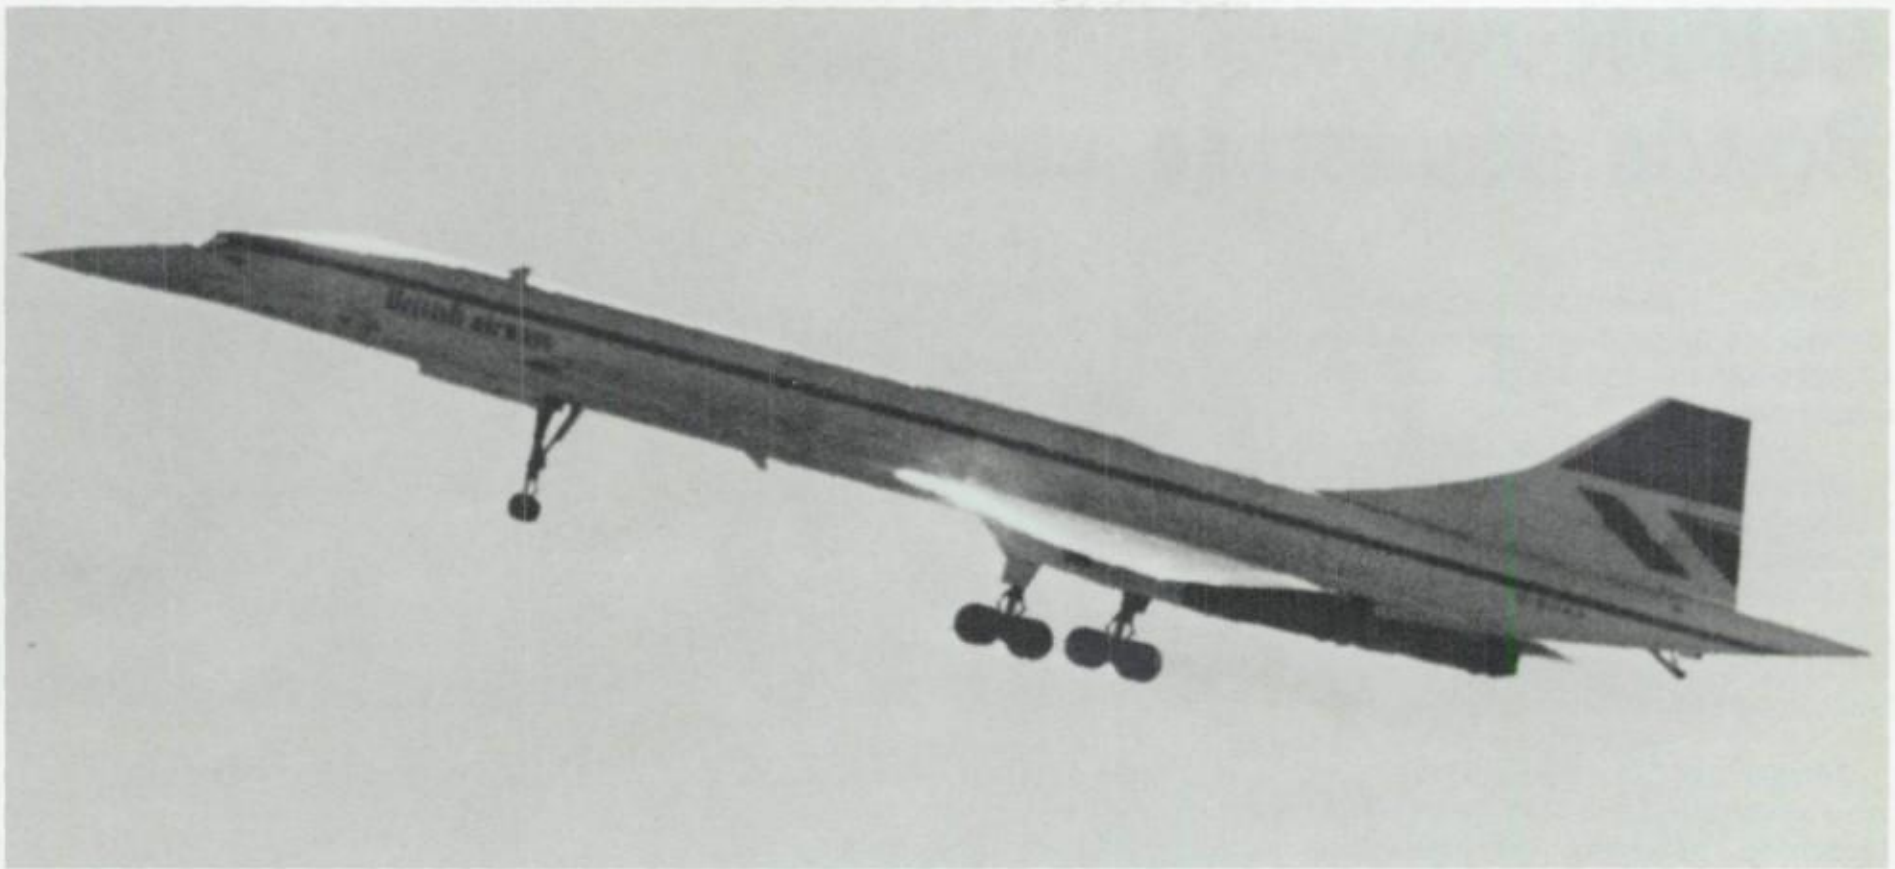

In January, site selection came before the legislature again: strong consideration was given to building the new facility at Florence.

The escape of Gary Tison and, more recently his son Ricky, caused the Department of Corrections to completely revamp the leadership of the prison at Florence.

The breakout has been partially blamed on incompetence on the part of prison security officials. Tison had made several escape attempts but was never put in tighter security.

The ease with which his sons spirited Tison and his fellow prisoner Randy Greenawalt from the prison hinted at a conspiracy among prison officials.

Alfatoxin is a mold on the cotton seed fed to cows. Milk supplies were dumped soon after discovery and production began again. Babbitt elected Governor; floods devastate valley

By Karyn d'Eon

On Nov. 7, Arizonans cast ballots for four congressmen, all top state officers including governor, and 90 legislative seats.

Congress

All four incumbents sought re-election and each won. Rep. John Rhodes, Republican, was elected again in the 1st district; Democrat Morris Udall, 2nd district; Democrat Bob Stump, 3rd district; and Republican Eldon Rudd, 4th district.

Governor

Democratic Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who succeeded the late Wesley Bolin March 4, 1978, won the '78 election against Republican Evan Mecham; Libertarian Gene Lewter; and socialist worker, Jessica Sampson.

Attorney General

Republican Bob Corbin became the Attorney General over Democrat Dino DeConcini. Corbin was a former Maricopa County Supervisor and county attorney.

Secretary Of State

The incumbent Democrat Rose Mofford won Secretary of State over former county supervisor Henry Haws, Republican and Libertarian Monica Swift.

Mofford was appointed to the post by Bolin, who had moved up from Secretary of State to Governor after former governor Raul Castro was appointed ambassador to Argentina.

Treasurer

Republican Clark Dierks, chief deputy state treasurer, beat Democrat Gary Bartlett by 100,000 votes. Libertarian Joe D. Yancey also ran.

Corporation Commission

After a close contest, Republican Stan Akers defeated Democrat John Ahern. Libertarian Aaron Leonard was defeated.

Supt. Of Public Instruction

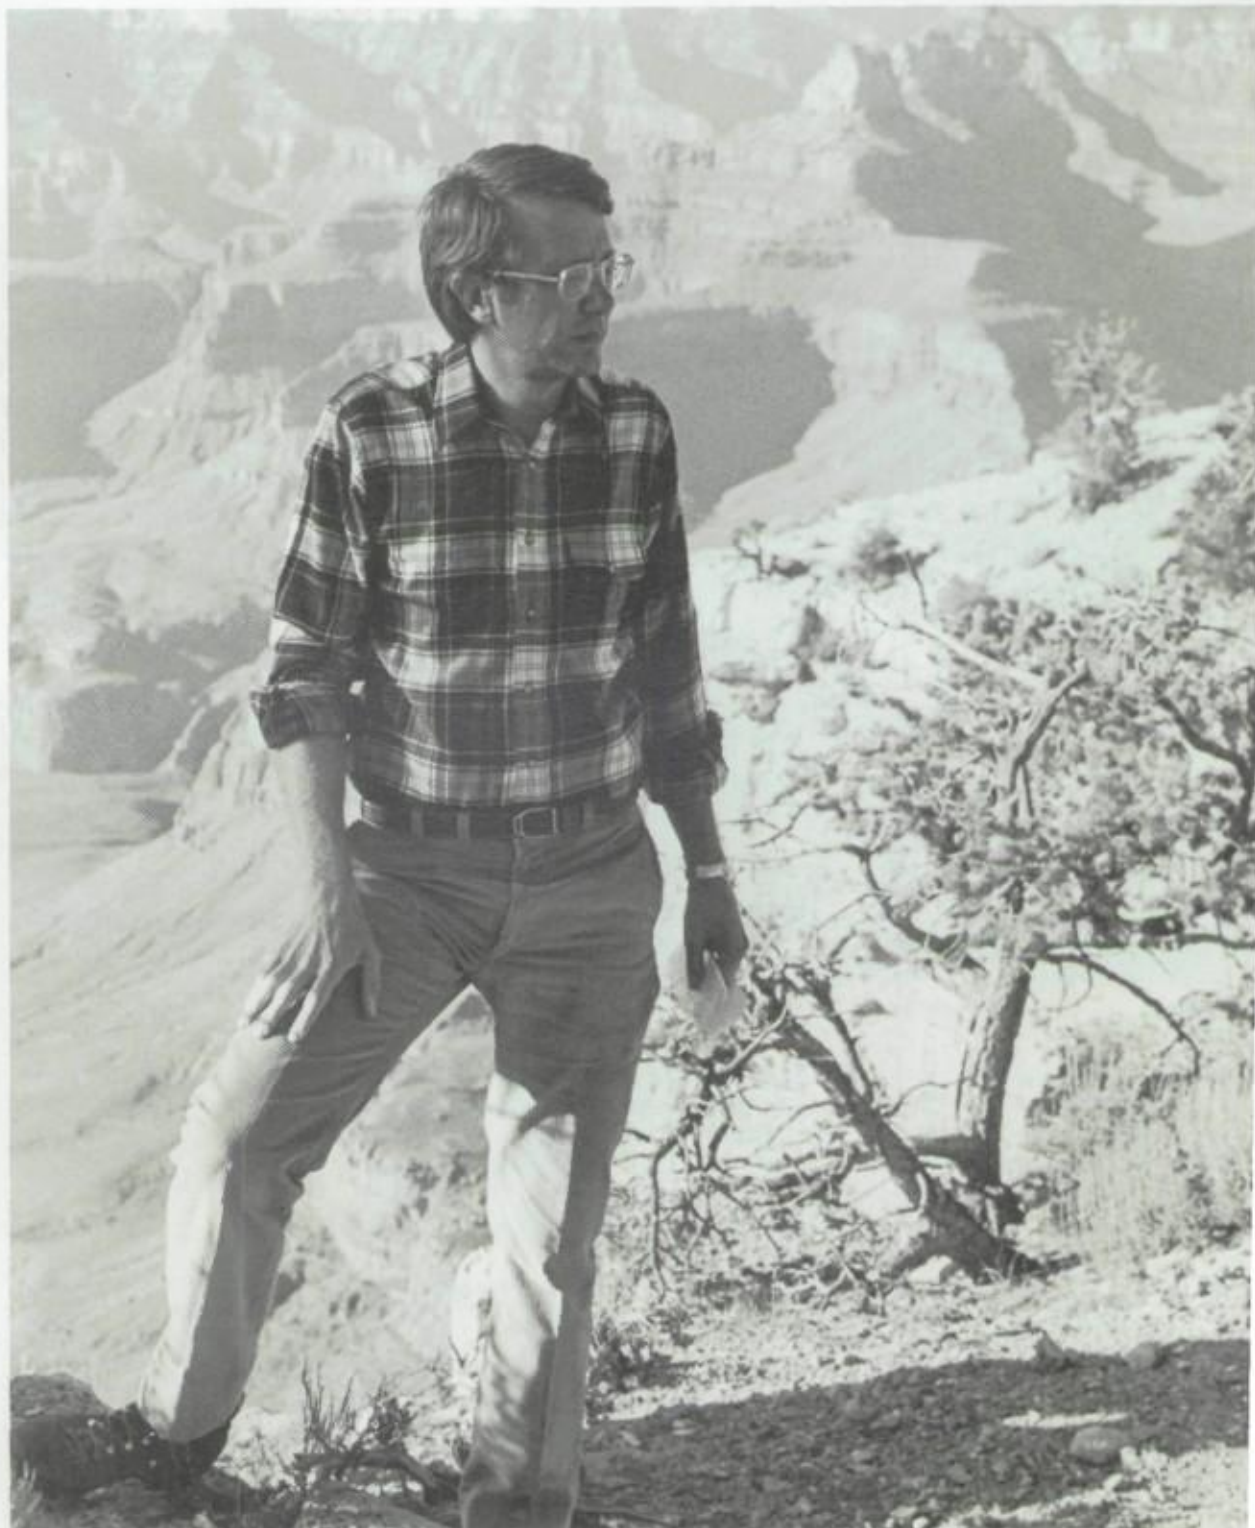

Incumbent Carolyn Warner, Democrat, beat Steve Jenkins, Republican; and Judy Felstein, Libertarian, in the Supt. of Public Instruction race.

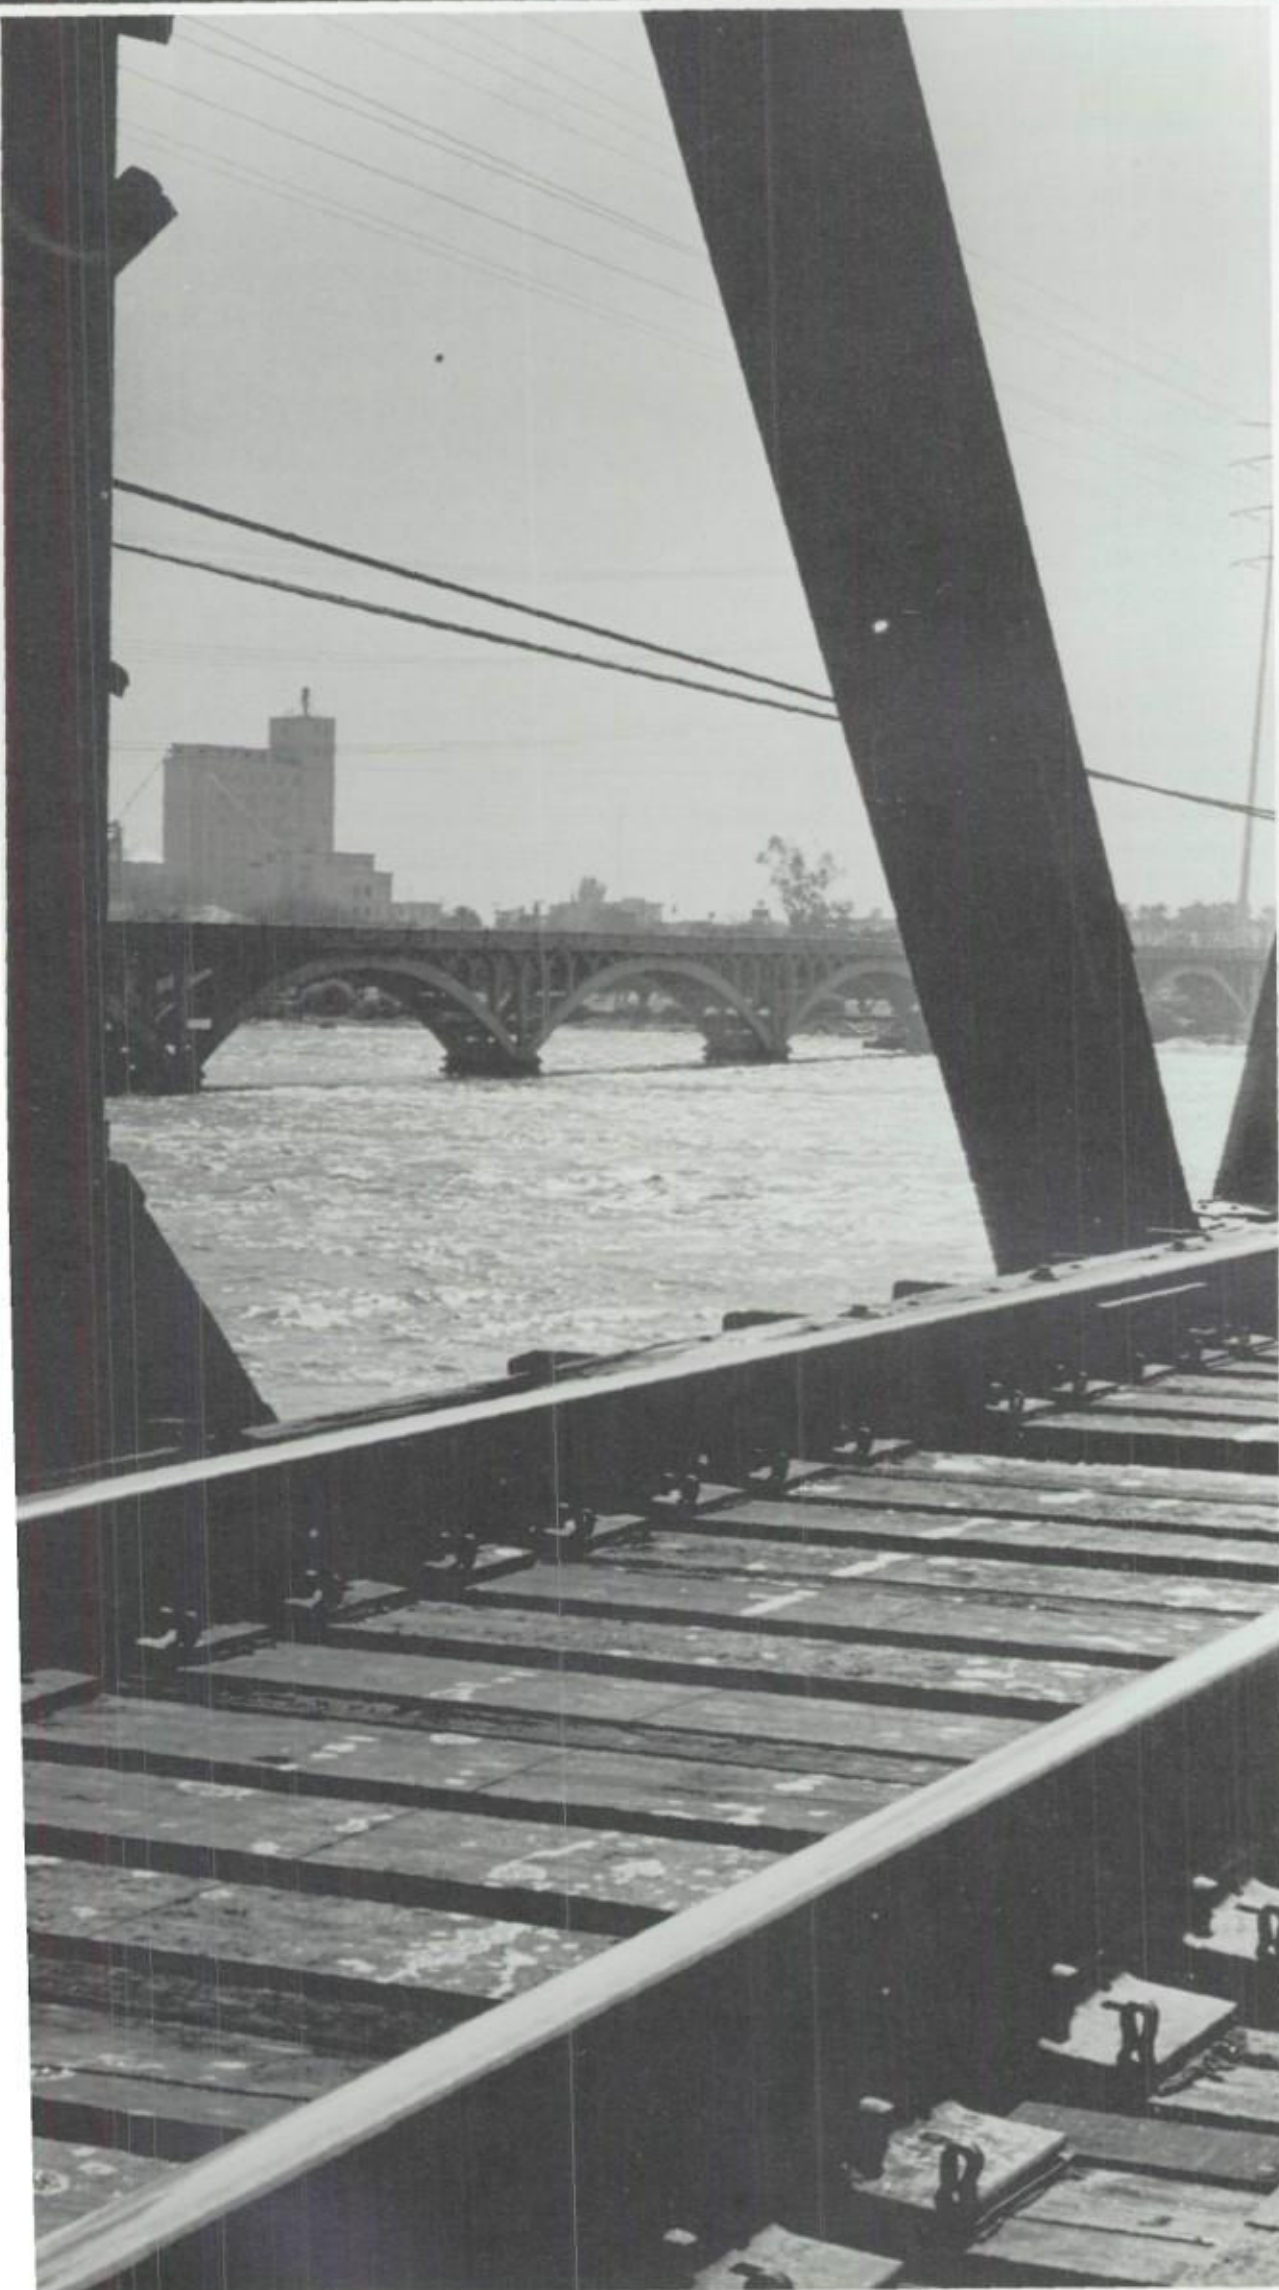

Mine Inspector

Republican James McCutchan defeated Democrat Ted Martinez for mine inspector. Voters may have thought they were casting their ballots for McCutchan's late father, Verne. The elder McCutchan was running for re-election as mine inspector when he died just before the September primary. Babbitt picked the son to serve out the senior McCutchan's term.

Floods

By Annette Jimenez

The year 1978-1979 will be known in years to come as the "year of the floods." Within 10 months Arizona had three floods sweep through her valley.

The first flood struck in March. Heavy rains caused an excess of water behind Roosevelt Dam, so the Salt River Project (SRP) let water out of the dam, releasing it into the Salt River down the middle of the valley.

Damage caused by the flood was estimated to be in the millions. Bridges collapsed, streets needed repairing and flood victims needed relief. The hardest hit area was South Phoenix, where people were flooded out of their homes.

The only bridges open across the Salt River were the Mill Avenue Bridge, Central Avenue and Maricopa Freeway.

Eight months later, about a week before Christmas, heavy rains forced SRP to release more water, causing similar destruction as before. A month later the skies were still pouring rain into the valley, bringing the third flood.

Flood control was a much talked about subject among the Phoenixians. One of the suggestions was to make Roosevelt dam bigger. Another suggestion was that other bridges should be built over the Salt River. The state began constructing dams which will be ready by 1991. Two of the four bridges under construction will be completed in a few years.

ONE Republican Bob Corbin was elected in 1978 as state Attorney General.

TWO Bruce Babbitt, Democrat, who succeeded the late Governor Wesley Bolin last March, won the '78 gubernatorial election.

THREE The Mill Avenue bridge was one of the only three bridges that could be used during the several floods on '78-79.

Get the EDGE on your life

Story and photos by Maureen McSpadden

Where do you get the EDGE on your life? Not at the local supermarket. The seminars for Educational Development for Growth and Effectiveness (EDGE) is the place to go if you want to feel better about yourself.

EDGE participants learn how to "displace" their old attitudes and bring forth new ones. They learn how to improve their self-image, develop selfconfidence, improve grades and social lives. A main portion of the seminar teaches participants how to set and reach goals, how to have a winning attitude, and how to recognize and use their potential. Important for teens is the recognition of the difference between vanity and self-esteem.

"Action for Excellence" is the condensed version of the adult seminar; it is limited to teens.

EDGE, formerly the Pacific Insittute, has educated several Coronado champions. The Dons football team won the state championship in 1976, along with the 1976 and 1977 cross country teams. All three attended the EDGE confidence courses.

Several student councils have been through the program, also the award-winning Explorer and Trial staffs.

Student Body President Bret Godfrey said "EDGE should be used as a tool. It should be taught to the kids so it can be used." He said it had caused a change in the attitude of the student council.

Federal funding paid for approximately 200 sophomores who attended the course in December. They were given a test before and after the course to record their progress. The student council also attended through a government grant.

"We're looking at it in consideration of an ongoing program here at Coronado," said Dr. Ed Segrave. Segrave was in charge of chartering students for the program. Four Coronado teachers, Dr. Sonnie Stevens, Dale Foote, Jerry Smith, and Roberta Gallagher attended a training course in January to prepare them to instruct future courses at Coronado.

Dr. Bill Cole, an ex-football coach, is president of EDGE. He is the instructor at Coronado and other schools. "The purpose of EDGE is to help students understand that they have control over their lives." He said that "mind-management" is the key to its success.

High school-aged people regularly pay $45 for the seminar. The registration fee for adults is $280. "We try to give it away to the teens," said Cole. "That's the age where goal-setting is vital." He added that at times people don't pay any attention to what they've learned Later, when they feel they really need it, they can look back at their notes and use it. "It's not the information that counts; it's the use of the information."

Other organizations that have attended EDGE Seminars are the McClintock Chargers, 1977 state football champions; the Internal Revenue Service; ASU Alumni; ASU Athletic Department; and the entire Scottsdale School District.

"EDGE was highly motivating and worth-while," said senior Vernon Robertson.

State cross country champion Kerry Bogner added, "It's great... but only go for what you can see yourself doing."

Cole agrees, "You have to be able to see the line between goals and dreams."

Rainy weather fails to dampen homecoming

By Michele Courtney

"Discovery '78" was this year's Homecoming theme. Candidates for Homecoming King and Queen were Bret Godfrey, Jan Hamilton, Steve McGrady, Wendy Davenport, Jim Pfeiffer, Tony Quijada, Bob Dye, and Laurie Gill. Last year's Royalty, Jeff Anderson and Tammy Bondurant, returned to the football game to crown Bob Dye and Laurie Gill.

Traditional dress-alike days and contests were held throughout the week. A sexy lips contest was held. Senior Marguerite MacIntyre was the winner. Student Body President Bret Godfrey was the winner of the ugly legs contest. The most beautiful Don was Kim Behrens. The sophomore class won the window decorating. The seniors won the spirit link contest. The junior float took first place.

The dancing doughnuts again showed their skills at the Bonfire/Pep Assembly Thursday evening. Chairman Colleen O'Neill and Rick Fifield were King and Queen of the Bonfire.

Rainy weather all day Friday threatened the gridiron contest between the Dons and the Scottsdale High School Beavers, but skies cleared long enough for the Dons' victory fo 21-0. Because of the weather, the Dons Marching band presented their halftime show in jeans and Band T-shirts.

The Homecoming dance was held on a Saturday evening for the first time at Coronado. The band "Ice" performed in the gymnasium. The King and Queen reigned over the evening.

Two scenes of a full-length movie for young people were shot at Coronado in December. The film is tentatively called "Flying High." The title may be changed so as not to conflict with the television show by the same name. The movie has a background of hot air ballooning. It tells how three kids with problems turn to the church for direction.

Coronado sophomore Jodie Knutson played the leading role as Susan Arnold, a flighty, happy-go-lucky high school freshman. Jodie has appeared in several commercials for McDonald's, Roloids, and Ramada Inn. She has taken drama classes at Coronado and was in the school production of "Story Theatre." She is also active in the Phoenix Children's Theatre where she starred as "Cinderella."

Sandy Knutson, Jodie's mother and assistant producer of the film, was partially responsible for Coronado being chosen for the filming. Mrs. Knutson was formerly Assoc. Principal William Johnson's secretary. She enjoyed working with the students and thought Coronado would be the ideal setting for the film.

Besides Jodie Knutson's starring role, Junior Larry Pellerito was also hired for a small part. Other Coronado students who were paid as extras were Eric Auxier, Teri Bell, Michelle Beshaw, Lonnie Boothe, Sharon Bradshaw, Philip Ciulla, Jim Durkin, Scott King, Tina Lindenbauer, Donna Lowes, Sandy MacDonald, Lori Nelson, Pat Nelson, Lori Nichols, Kelly O'Brien, Shannon O'Hara, Colleen O'Neill, Larry Pellerito, Eric Peterson, Betsy Sanderson, Kevin Seifert, Steve Shepherd, and Laura Watts.

The show was produced by Swartwout Productions; Frazier Productions did the filming. Stan Reilly wrote and directed the drama. The Swartwout Company has made one other hour-long film for young people, "The Prize," which featured a background of hotdog skiing in Tahoe, California.

Joan Colvin, bookkeeper for the company, said she thought that the background of hot air ballooning was good because it added excitement and got the kids' attention.

"Piano Man" visits valley

By Karyn d'Eon

Billy Joel came to Arizona State University Activity Center Nov. 2, to enthrall a crowd of 12,144.

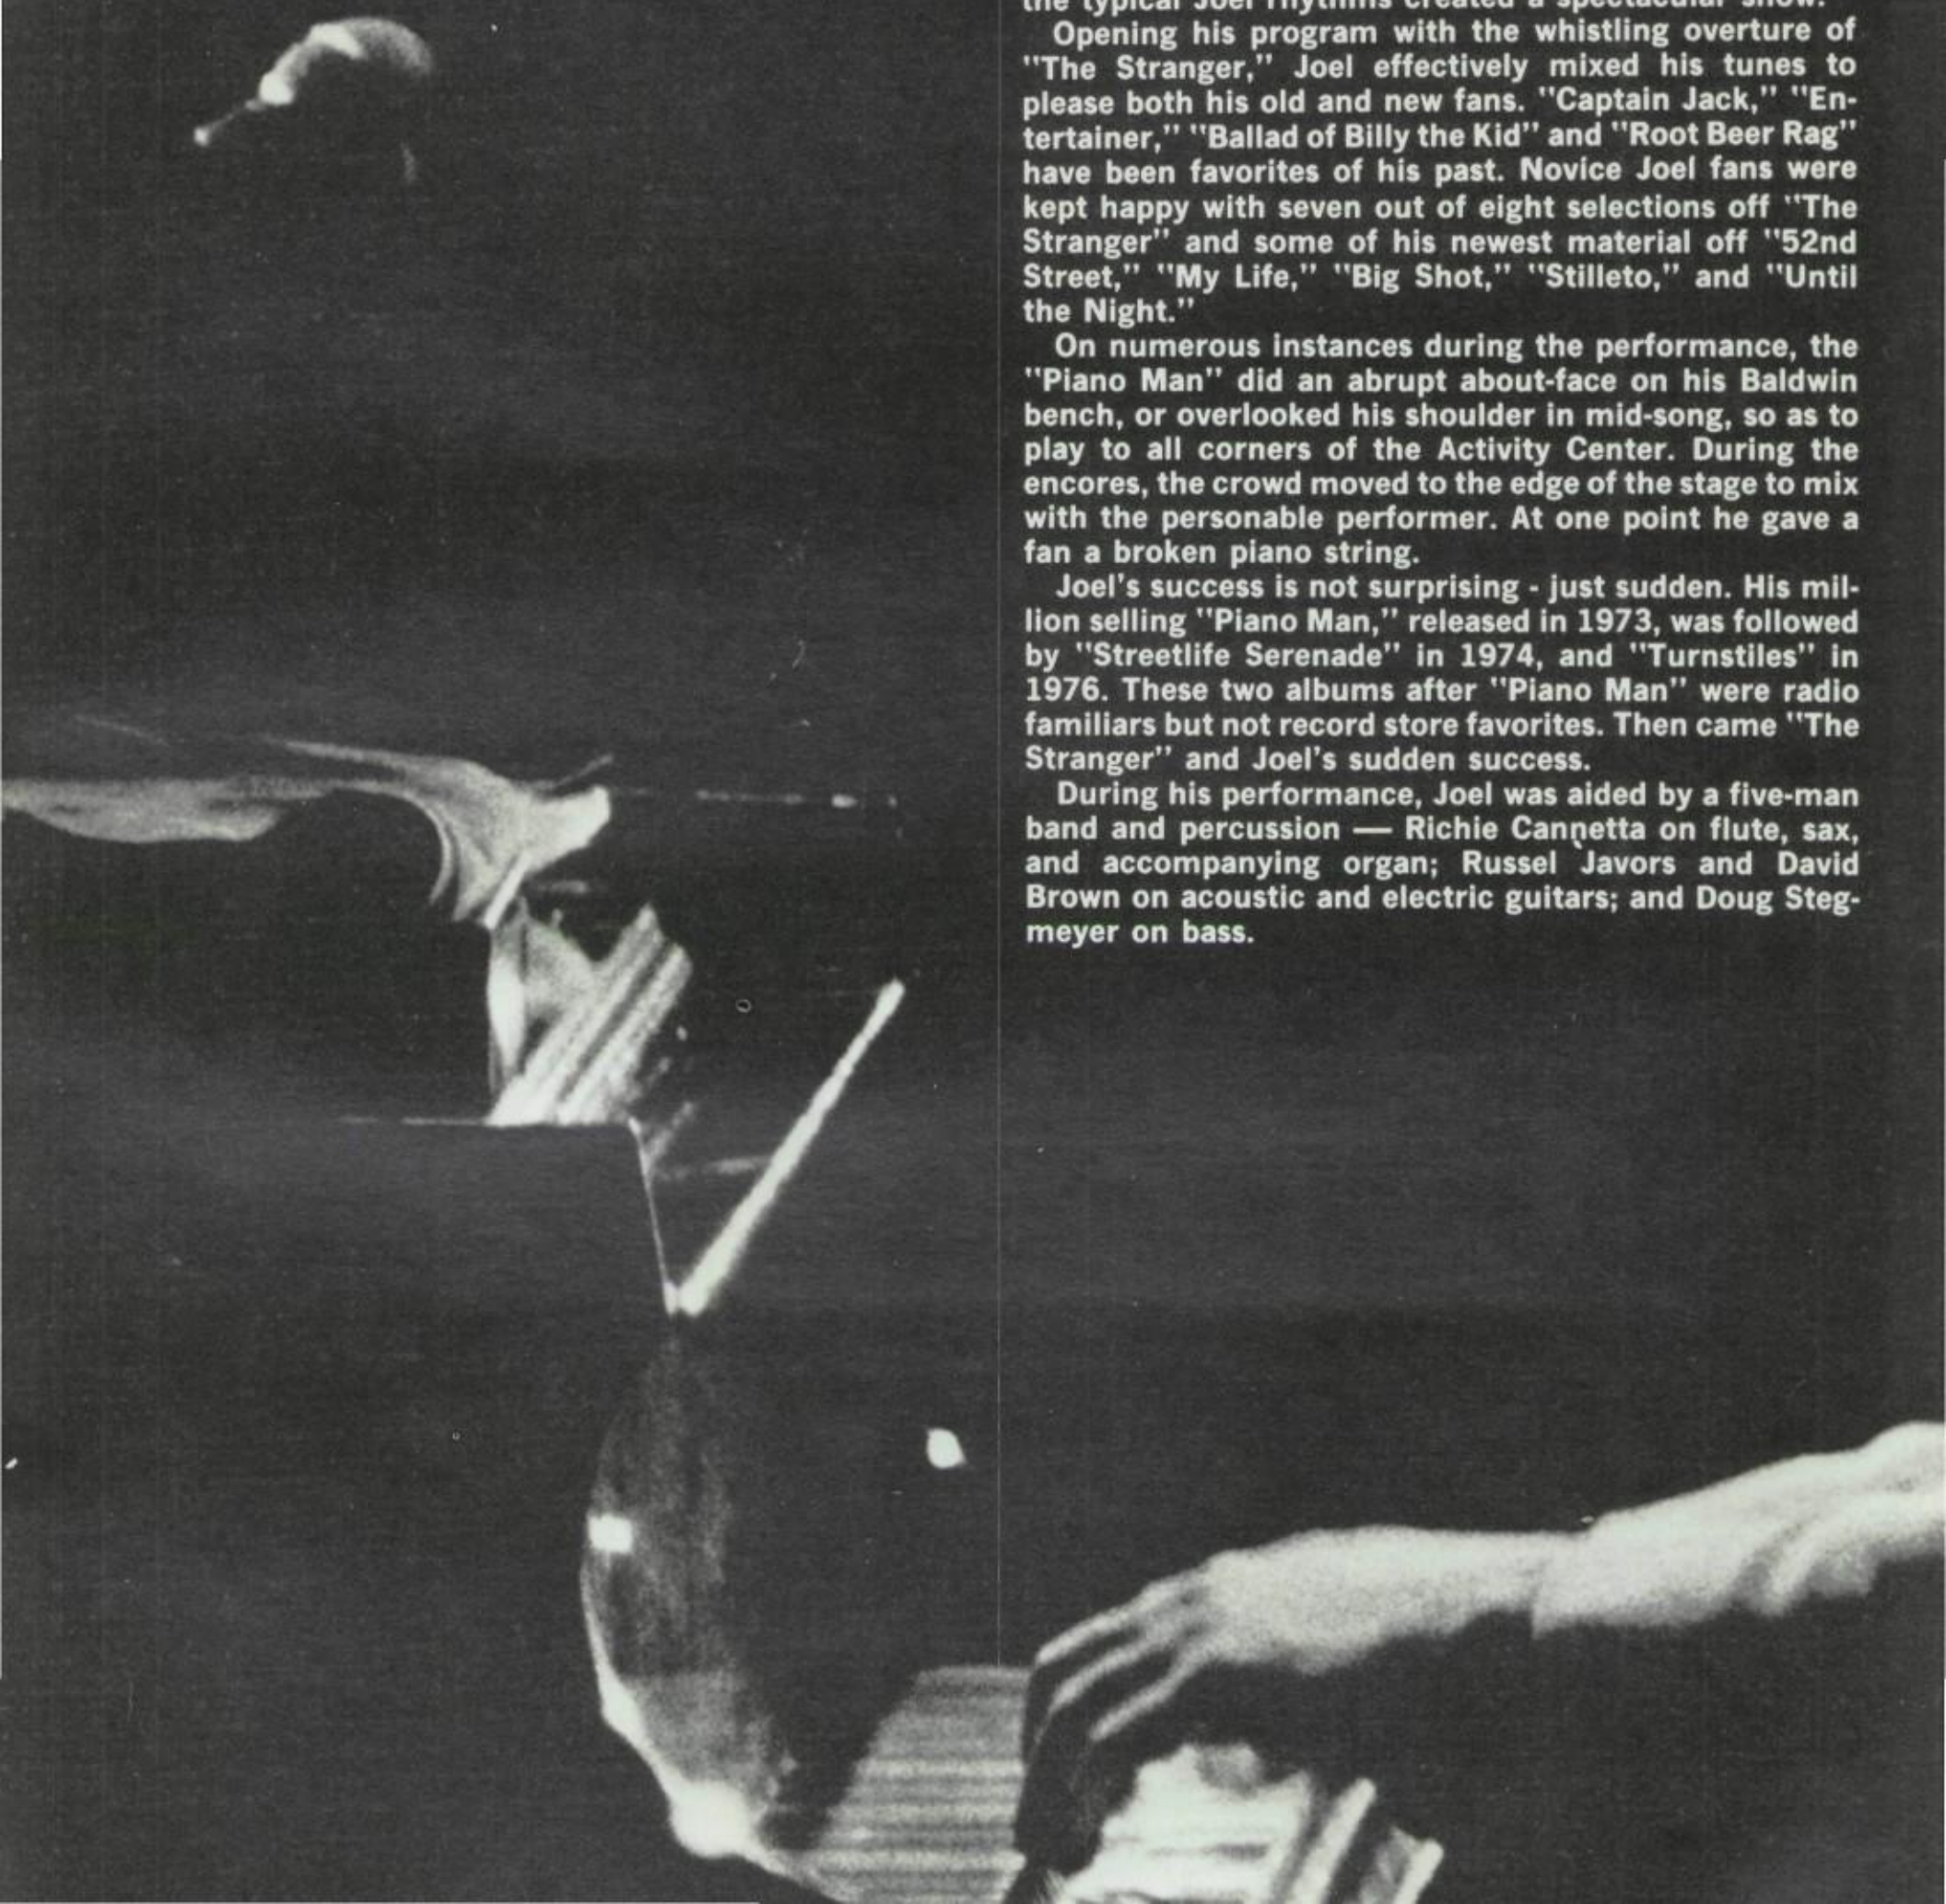

The drama of the flashing colored lights mixed with the typical Joel rhythms created a spectacular show.

Opening his program with the whistling overture of "The Stranger," Joel effectively mixed his tunes to please both his old and new fans. "Captain Jack," "Entertainer," "Ballad of Billy the Kid" and "Root Beer Rag" have been favorites of his past. Novice Joel fans were kept happy with seven out of eight selections off "The Stranger" and some of his newest material off "52nd Street," "My Life," "Big Shot," "Stilleto," and "Until the Night."

On numerous instances during the performance, the "Piano Man" did an abrupt about-face on his Baldwin bench, or overlooked his shoulder in mid-song, so as to play to all corners of the Activity Center. During the encores, the crowd moved to the edge of the stage to mix with the personable performer. At one point he gave a fan a broken piano string.

Joel's success is not surprising - just sudden. His million-selling "Piano Man," released in 1973, was followed by "Streetlife Serenade" in 1974, and "Turnstiles" in 1976. These two albums after "Piano Man" were radio familiars but not record store favorites. Then came "The Stranger" and Joel's sudden success.

During his performance, Joel was aided by a five-man band and percussion — Richie Cannetta on flute, sax, and accompanying organ; Russel Javors and David Brown on acoustic and electric guitars; and Doug Stegmeyer on bass.

Fun and frolic, murder and magic, hit valley screens

By Cindy Austin and Annette Jimenez

This year held a wide range of hit movies for avid movie-goers and part-time fans alike.

"Heaven Can Wait" is a happy-go-lucky movie about a pro football player (Warren Beatty) who dies by mistake, and comes back to life with the help of his angel as a rich company executive to help a damsel in distress (Julie Christie).

"Watership Down" is an animated adventure about a group of rabbits, one of whom has a vision of destruction in their village. The story is how the group escapes to a better life.

"Grease" is a fun-and-games movie starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John. There is lots of singing and dancing, and funny, typical teenage problems.

"Foul Play" is a funny, suspense-filled love story. Goldie Hawn has found out about a group of men who are trying to kill the Pope. She and Chevy Chase (her protector) are being chased by an albino.

"Magic" is the story of Corky Withers (Anthony Hopkins) and Fats, a ventriloquism act, who work their way up to the top. Fats is Corky's one true friend, his adviser, his confidant, and finally his destruction. Fats is the wooden dummy of the duo, but through him Corky finds a release from his own frustration and inability to handle things on his own.

Ann Margret is Peggy Ann Snow through whom Corky must find his own sanity and escape the influence of his schizophrenic mind.

Fables, tales improvised by Theater

Story by Michele Courtney
Photos by Larry McGrath

"Story Theatre" was the first Fine Arts production of the year. The script was based on Grimm's Fairy Tales and Aesop's Fables adapted by Paul Sills. Some of the stories included "Henny Penny," "The Fisherman and His Wife," "The Bremen Town Musicians," "Little Peasant" and "Gragunga and the Dragon." The latter was written by the Roustabouts themselves. It was a family show and gave the actors an opportunity for improvement and experience with movement. Improvisation was used frequently. This was the only time this type of play has been done at Coronado.

Senior Laura Watts said, "It was my first show and everybody cooperated real well. Everybody that's been in other shows has helped a lot." Many actors felt they became closer to each individual in this production. "In preparing for the show, the rehearsals were very unconventional but constructive," said Senior Marguerite MacIntyre. The rehearsals usually began with a warmup exercise to get them loosened up. Senior Barry Mitchell explained, "We learned a lot of acting techniques because the show was so free-form and Mrs. Howell's allowance of creativity."

The entire cast visited the Phoenix Zoo and Sky Harbor Airport to observe the animals and people in order to capture the essence of the body movements. Movement and impression was significant because there were no costumes except pastel-colored jeans and T-shirts. Minor props like shawls, feathers and hats were the only wardrobe items.

Senior Dave Kelting designed the lights with Sophomore Steve Hyland assisting. Senior Shannon O'Hara made phone calls all over the valley to obtain seventeen sets of white jeans and T-shirts to dye each set a different pastel color.

During one of the performances, Barbara Gold and Carolyn LeFevre translated the show into sign language for the deaf. Deaf people from all over the valley came to watch the performance.

A TIME TO COME

Fantasies for future

By Maureen McSpadden and Karyn d'Eon

Possibly the greatest science fiction (SF) was written by 19th Century author Jules Verne. Verne's work was considered at the time simply SF. Now we know it as pre-science. He was able to foretell space travel, the satellite, the helicopter, and the submarine. In one piece, "For the Flag," he hinted about atomic energy.

Is today's SF actually pre-science?

Most definitely. NASA has created the first reusable space craft, a space shuttle that doesn't burn up when it reenters the atmosphere. In honor of "Star Trek's" amazing starship, NASA named its craft the Enterprise.

In the summer of 1977 came the landmark space adventure. "Star Wars" featured the greatest special effects yet. The advance in technology is quite evident when comparing the work of George Lucas, Gary Kurtz, and John Dykstra in "Star Wars" to that of Verne's writings and Gene Roddenberry's "Star Trek."

The storyline to "Star Wars" space fantasy is one that's been repeated down through time: Good triumphs over evil. It's a medieval idea, but quite effective in "Star Wars." The old fashioned theme seemed new in the setting of a far away galaxy.

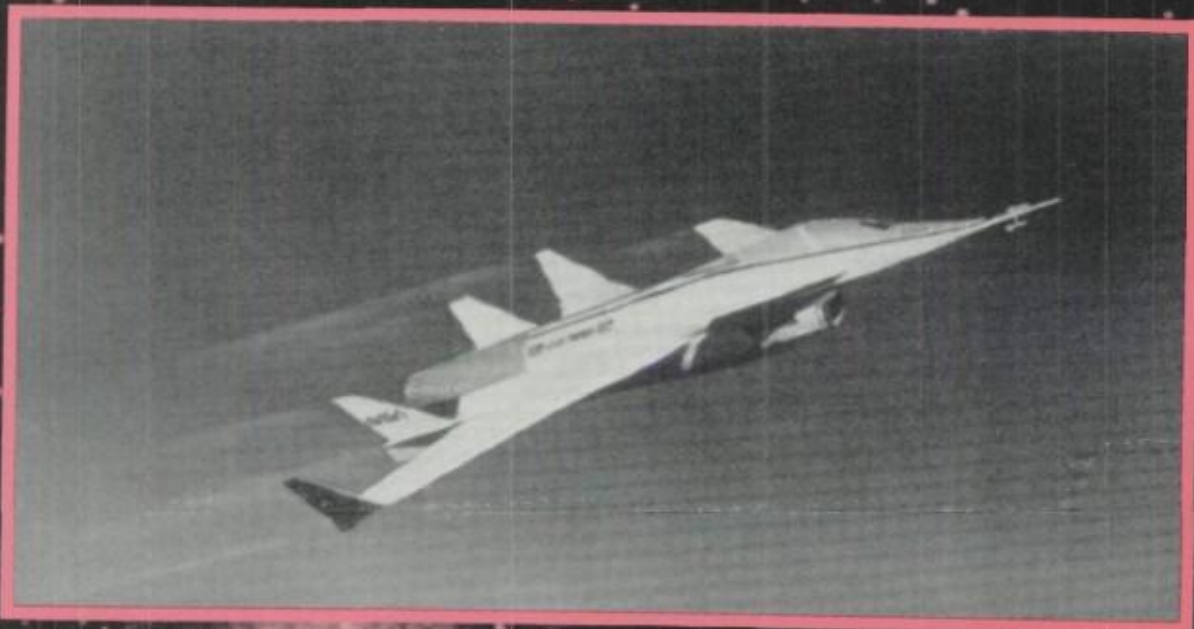

Not long after the space fantasy came a more earthly prospect in "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." Here the Earth scientists did something not often seen in SF films. They established a friendly relationship with the alien beings. To believers of extra-terrestrial life, this proved to be a relief. Although many people believed in other worlds, few ever thought of alien creatures as being friendly. They had never considered it because few books or films tried it. "Close Encounters" made sense.

Most recent of the SF hits is the television series and movie version of "Battlestar Galactica." The ships and other effects are amazingly similar to "Star Wars." This is accredited to John Dykstra, special effects director of both productions.

How do ideas like these become landmark productions? With men like Glen Larson, creator and producer of "Battlestar."

"I'm really interested in the whole concept of how life began on this planet," said Larson. "And I certainly believe there are an incredible number of civilizations out there." "Battlestar's" Biblical references are quite obvious. Larson explains, "The scriptures tell us that 'In my Father's house are many mansions.' To me, this refers to the other worlds, to things that exist beyond this life."

Jack Webb, creator of NBC's "Project: UFO", says "It's naive for us to believe that we're all there is. There are over a hundred thousand planets in the Milky Way that could sustain life as we know it." Webb continues, "Why should Earth be the only one to have life?"

How is today's SF affecting the future?

Here in Arizona is a city of the future, Arcosanti, at Cordes Junction. The city, when completed, will be totally sun-powered and will have no need for automobiles, factories, or other contaminating social ills.

There's one thing that can always be counted on, and that's progress. There's lots in store for us in the time to come.

"The Crucible," Arthur Miller's dramatization of the Salem witch trials, was performed in the round by James Newcomer's advanced acting and directing class Nov. 29-Dec. 2.

The play told the story of certain children who used their powers of pretence to do away with their enemies by accusing them of being witches. In the real trials, 19 people were hung and one pressed to death with stones.

"The Crucible's" double cast gave two different approaches to the characters. Mark Litwicki gave John Proctor a bit of humor; Barry Mitchell emphasized the intelligence of the farmer.

Pat Nelson showed the Rev. Hale was a clever and precise man. Scott King displayed the more understanding side of Hale.

Doug Steindorff made the cold, hard Rev. Parris believable with the outstanding ability to yell. Hugh Hallman was more ardent.

Peggy Murray portrayed the role of Abigail Williams as a self-possessed young girl. Marguerite MacIntyre expressed a more indignant view.

The special effects included synthesized music, together with a slide presentation of medieval woodcuts.

What does student government do for Coronado and its students? About half the students surveyed had a general notion of student officers' responsibilities. Some made good guesses.

"They represent the student body" . . . "Try to improve everything on school, . . . Raise money," . . . "Plan activities and listen to student complaints. . . ." were sample comments.

The student Body Officers have different functions. They sponsored the Howdy Hop and the freshman elections early in the year. They organized various Homecoming activities, along with a used book and canned food drive. They also organized a talent show.

Student Council donated money to students to assist them in going to workshops, and medical expense on occasion. They planned an Opympic Jog to raise money for the 1980 Olympics. The Easter Seals Dance-a-thon was one of their major projects.

President Bret Godfrey's main job was running the council meetings. He was the official representative of Coronado at outside events. Godfrey controlled the functioning of the Executive Board and appointed people to fill positions in case of vacancies.

Vice President Jan Hamilton ran the football and basketball assemblies for the council. She acted as Parliamentarian and sergeant-at-arms at all student body functions and meetings.

Tracy Christopher, recording secretary, took the minutes and handled the clerical business during meetings.

Kelly McCrocklin, corresponding secretary, kept records between schools and the administration. She updated Executive Board bulletin and worked closely with the Public Relations Director.

John Vise, treasurer, was the one

Student body officers represent peers who handled the monetary books. He recorded and informed the board of any monetary expenditures and transactions in which the student body was involved.

Vernon Robertson, chief justice, was in charge of insuring proper functioning of the court of justice and presided over any sessions that might have been convened.

The governor of social activities was Colleen O'Neill. She planned and conducted the social calendar of the school.

Mike Mall, student board advisor, attended school board meetings. Domestic advisors were Rob Holman and Jamie Fritzlin. They were aides to the president and helped the vice-president in the spirit rallies.

Student council members attended a one-hour class daily and received a credit in social services. They learned parliamentary procedures and Robert's Rules of Order. They attended the EDGE seminars (see pages 32-33) for confidence building and responsibility.

Parents go to school, too

Parents in the Coronado neighborhood are actively involved in school life. They participate through organized activities such as Open House, Booster Clubs, Parent Advisory Council and Parent Education seminars. They come on an individual basis to meet with teachers, counselors and principals.

Open House. Coronado's annual Open House was held Oct. 4. Parents followed their students' schedules to visit classrooms and meet the teachers.

Booster Clubs. Coronado has two supportive parent clubs. Coronado Booster Club originally was established to boost athletics but has since expanded to support all aspects of the school program. There is also a Band Booster Club to recognize students' accomplishments through music.

Parent Advisory Council. "The parent Advisory Council is made up of a group of parents that assist us in staying in tune with our Coronado community," said Principal Robert Hendricks.

R.T. "Sandy" Sandersons presides over the group of about 30 members. The Council is made up of anybody that wants to be a member, said Hendricks.

Parent Education Seminar. Psychologist Janeen Groseth and Saguaro psychologist Alex Kadrie offered a free eight-week Parent Education Seminar twice during the year. Ways of handling parent-child problems, new techniques for opening and improving communication lines, and suggestions for changing or modifying parents' behavior were discussed.

Royalty crowned twice in one weekend

By Michele Curtney

Two Crownings took place on the first weekend of February.

King and Queen of Courts were honored at the Friday night basketball game; Sweetheart Queen was recognized at the Saturday evening Criada Sweetheart Prom.

Bret Godfrey, varsity basketball player and student body president; and Toni Quijada, varsity cheerleader, reigned over the basketball court the evening of Feb. 2. The crowning took place during the half time activities of the Coronado versus Mt. View basketball game. Returning '78 King and Queen, Tom Longo and Rene Leyvas, invested King Bret Godfrey and Queen Toni Quijada with the traditional crowns and robes. Both ball teams had a challenging evening, but Mt. View escaped with a narrow one-point victory over Coronado, 64-65.

Jan Hamilton, student body vice-president, was crowned Sweetheart Queen at the '79 Criada Sweetheart Prom on Feb. 3. The Colonial Room of Ramada East was the location of the annual festivities. Junior Ana Murrieta, varsity cheerleader; sophomore Mary Menosky, JV cheerleader; and freshman Maryann Lague were crowned Princesses representing their respective classes. More than 175 couples danced to the music of V.I.P. The "Memories" theme was carried out with a seagull design on posters, cakes, invitations and programs.

Royalty of the Courts candidates for King were Mitch Dickerson, Steve McGrady, and Rob Holman; and for Queen, Julie Sherman, Tracy Christopher and Jane Scott.

Members of the Sweetheart Court who were Queen candidates were seniors Lisa Talbot and Lisa Ware; and Princess candidates were Jody Paetz and Anita Whitlatch, juniors; Anna Angulo and Mary Zertuche, sophomores; and Jody Davenport and Vickie Williams, freshmen

Joe Boyd saves Senators from Yankees; Fine Arts perform musical farce on devil

By Karyn d'Eom
Photos by Randy Schmid

A collection of melodic songs from the 60's, the excitement of baseball, and an intriguing conflict with the devil were combined in the Fine Arts musical of "Damn Yankees" in March.

The production was highlighted by a unique baseball marquee which served two purposes. During the baseball games it kept score for the audience; during intermission it projected advertisements and personal messages purchased by Scottsdale merchants and Coronado students.

Instead of background scenery, the set was a "card section" held up by the players. The pieces fit together like a puzzle to make a scene.

Diabolical reds and flashy blacks in modern style clothing served as costumes for the main characters.

The plot revolves around Joe Hardy, a middle-aged man who always wanted to play baseball for his favorite team, the Washington Senators.

Applegate, the devil, makes a deal with Joe. He can go off and play ball, but the catch is he must leave his beloved wife, Meg. Joe decides to go, so Applegate temporarily turns him into a young man.

Lola is a vamp who belongs to the devil. Her job is to prevent Joe from going back to Meg. If he does go back to Meg, the devil will lose the chance to win Joe's soul.

Joe decides that he doesn't want to sell out to Applegate for good and he plans to go back to his wife after the last game. While the big game is on Lola, keeps Applegate preoccupied so Joe can help the Senators win.

An unexpected turn of events foils the devil and makes a surprise ending.

KNOW ABOUT ...

COMPETITIONS

Did you know that areas other than sports are involved in competing with the schools in our conference?

Competitions, the revised section in our book, has been developed to include everything that competes interscholastically—sports, choruses, bands, speech, and chess.

We feel that the changes in this section are adding life to our book, and more meaning. We feel we're being fair to all the groups on campus that compete interscholastically. Athletic teams aren't the only groups on campus that experience the "thrill of victory and the agony of defeat." With that, these new changes will make our section more exciting and interesting to you.

In this section you'll see all these determined students. You'll see some new competitive groups on campus and some old ones you never knew about.

You're about to learn "Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Competitions."

Donettes parade, perform pre-game show at NAU

By Brenda Kennell

The Donettes are a part of the Marching Band. They attend summer Band Camp in Carlsbad, California. Then went to Northern Arizona University, where they were in a parade and did a pre-game show.

"The Donettes have to be willing to put in many long hours and be ready for very vigorous work," said Coach Juana Fredrick.

The Donettes were in the gym at six every morning to practice.

"I think being a Donette is fun," said Varsity Donette Jane Scott. "It's a lot of hard work, but it's worth it when you perform".

Eugene Hanson chose not to enter the Marching Band and Donettes in Arizona State University's Band Day this year. He was glad afterwards that he made this decision because the record high temperature caused many band members of other groups to need medical help.

Cheerleaders' spirit wins top ribbons

by Brenda Kennell

Cheerleaders function at all pep assemblies during the year and lead the student body through all victories and defeats during the athletic seasons.

Coach Juana Fredrick, who has coached cheerleaders for seven years, said, "Cheerleading is not easy; many long and hard hours go into every cheer."

"It's fun. It taught me a whole lot," said Captain Lisa Stanojlovic. "You become really good friends with the rest of the squad; it teaches you to be more responsible." She also added, "It's fun to cheer the football team."

At camp this summer, which is held at Lha Yho Camp in California, the Cheerleaders received straight superior ribbons and spirit sticks for the most spirit. They also earned an award for excellence out of many other squads.

Jim Poplawski and Randy Bishop were the coaches for the Freshman A team. They finished the season with an 8-1 record. Their only loss was to Chaparral by four points. They won the rest by ten points or more, with two shutouts against Carson and Powell.

Poplawski has coached football for 13 years, with five Freshmen and eight on Junior Varsity before that.

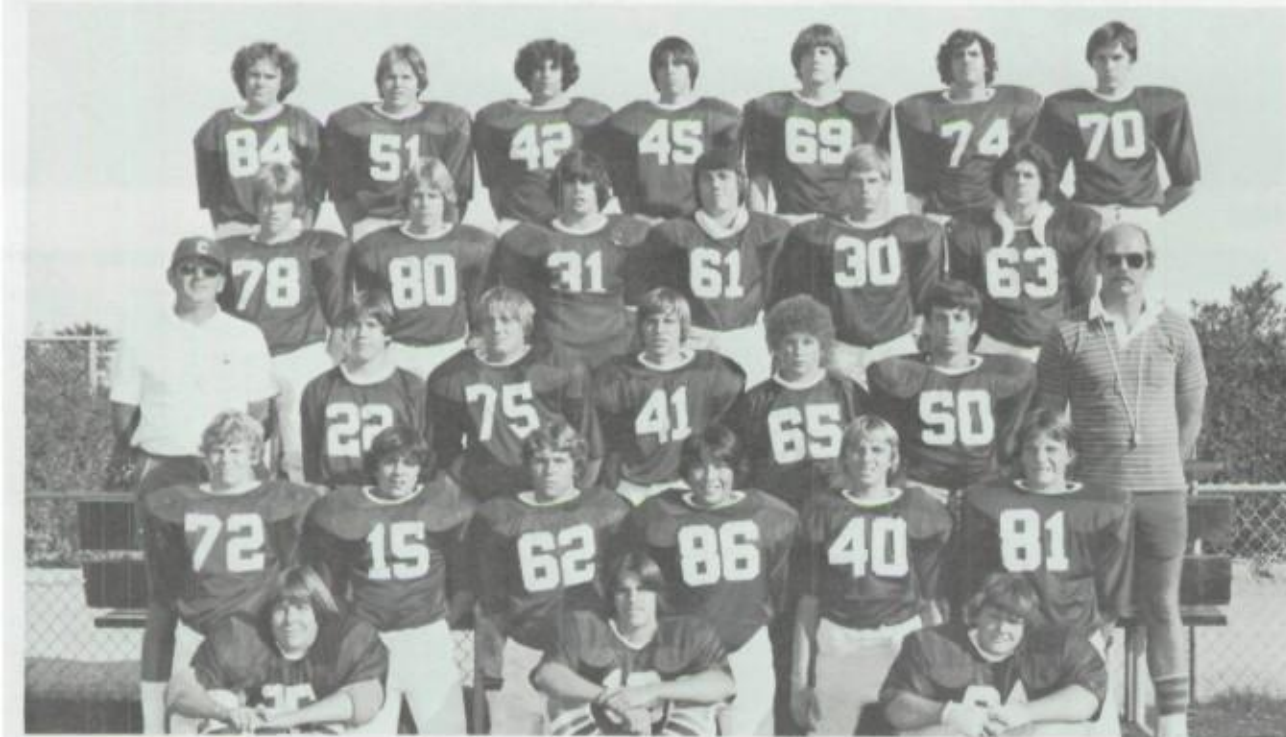

Prominent players were Chris Mitchell, quarterback; Dan O'Harra, receiver; and Mike Rogers, slotback for offense. Jim Hegarty and Dan Jantzen were commended on defense Scott Bucher for both offense and defense.

"The future looks good for JV and Varsity," beamed Poplawski. When asked what determines whether a player continues in football, he said, "Some don't like it and change to another sport. Frosh football is experimental. They need a chance to specialize, whether it be in football or another sport."

JV Football showed spirit hustle, pride

Story by Brenda Kennell

"They had a lot of hustle, a lot of spirit, a lot of pride," said Coach Dave Wright of his Junior Varsity football squad. "We just didn't have very much size and not much speed."

Wright said that the opposing coaches always said the JV team had played tough, even though they only won one game and tied one with eight losses.

"They did their best, but sometime that just ain't good enough," said Wright. "There were several games where we didn't get beat by much."

Wright said they were a "close-knit bunch of kids" with a real feeling of togetherness and supportiveness.

"That's something they'll keep for the rest of their lives," the coach added.

Varsity Volleyball Central Division Champs

By Brenda Kennell

The Varsity Volleyball team was Central Division Champions this year, winning 12 out of their 17 games.

"We played pretty well. Next year's our rebuilding year," said Coach Juana Fredrick.

"We were a good team, with a lot of talent, and we played really well together," said Senior Peggy Dietrich.

The Volleyball team only had ten players, instead of the usual twelve. There was also a freshman team this year.

Prominent players were Crystal Williams, Patty Buss, Peggy Dietrich, Martha Yanez.

The girls swim team took third places in the Westwood Relays and the Central Division. They took fifth place in State competition. They achieved this success, despite being a team made up mostly of underclassmen.

"The girls did what we expected for a young team," said coach Paul Thornburgh, "and this season gives us even more to look forward to in the next couple of years, with all the new girls moving up."

The 25-member swim team, and their one diver Lisa Soto, practiced at El Dorado Park Pool for an hour and a half every day during their season.

The season's top ranked swimmers were sophomores Linda Thompson, Debbie Negus and Susan Heck.

Boys Cross Country team best in Valley

By Cathy Boyd

The boys cross country team completed their season this year with a 7-2 record. The team finished first in the City and Central Division meets and placed third in State competition.

"Well, we're greedy," said coach James Ryder, "we would've liked to win State again, but we're realistic enough to know we didn't quite have the depth or man power to do it this year."

The top runners of the 17-member team were seniors

Kerry Bogner, Kirk Fiehler, and Brad Kenney (also most improved runner of the year). Kevin Ritter, junior, was a very valued runner and the top returning prospect for next year.

Bogner, one of four returning letterman to the team, achieved the title of AAA individual State Champion for Coronado for the second continuous year.

"Training to win State," said Bogner, "gave me a distraction from the worries of adolescence. Now, not only do I know who I am, but so does everyone else."

"I feel very satisfied," was coach Dave Archibald's comment when asked how he felt about his State Champion girls cross country team.

This was the first year in the history of Coronado girls sports for a girls team to take a state championship.

The 12-member team won the City Championship, the Pima Aztec and Squaw Peak invitionals, and the State meet. They completed their undefeated winning season with a 14-0 record.

Archibald said that the girls were motivated to train during last summer because they knew a girls cross country team was planned for this year. This was one of the reasons for success. The coach felt another reason was the fact that the girls trained with the boys team.

"Coach Ryder (boys cross country coach) was just as much their coach as I was," stated Archibald.

Both boys and girls teams practiced every day for approximately two hours, running eight to ten miles daily. "Togetherness," noted Archibald, "is the main theme for cross country."

The team's top five runners were Jennie Stevens, Krys Blosser, Kim Wright, sophomores; Lisa Talbot, senior; and Aimme Burr, freshman.

"The fifth-ranked runner is just as important an instrument to the team as the first," Archibald said. "I'd like to give credit to all five top runners for achieving an undefeated season and the state championship."

"The entire team worked hard to improve, and as experience was gained, we were able to win more matches," stated boys Coach Carl Woodman. "Throughout the season these young gentlemen displayed good sportsmanship." The boys finished their season 5-8.

Tennis is team, individual competition

Tennis is a very physical sport. Even though there is no actual contact, both opponents are aggressive.

At a match a participant plays two matches. One match is a singles, where a player is pitted against another player ranked at the same position. After all six matches were played, there were three doubles matches. The winning team was determined by the majority of wins.

Karl Woodman, boys tennis coach, said he encourages participation as individuals. This included the West High Tennis Tournament which Coronado participated in.

Practice for girls and boys tennis is separate, but both practice for about two to two-and-a-half hours, five days a week.

The girls softball team had an outstanding season, narrowly missing going to state playoffs. They triumphed up until the second round of divisionals, when they lost to Scottsdale High.

"It was a good team, the best team," said Senior Crystal Williams, who has played softball all four years.

Prominent players were Cathy Tackett, Marcia Larson, Crystal Williams, and Karen Schulda.

"The girls played very well together," said Coach Juana Fredrick. "They won almost every game until divisionals."

Fredrick went on to say that the loss at divisionals was a big disappointment to the whole team, but, they still came out of the season with the best record for girls softball Coronado has ever had. They finished the season with a record of 15 wins, 3 losses and 1 tie.

The Varsity Wrestling season got off to a strong start by winning its matches by a large margin. Senior Paul Thorpe attributed this success to practice. "Practice is the biggest part in improvement in wrestling," he said. "Our practices seemed to bring out the most improvement in me, anyway." Another senior member, Scott Gray, said, "I feel that this was a great season. Wrestling takes brains and determination. The real winners were made in practice."

Six of Coronado's wrestlers placed in the Chaparral Invitational meet in December. These six were Jim ZuZu, Paul Thorpe, 2nd; Doug Kellermeyer, Scott Gray, 3rd; Alan Hoover, 4th; Jack Dunn, 5th; Chris Boillot, 6th.

The team lost some of its members at the beginning of the season due to injuries. Barry Weeter, Paul Tamborrino and Scott Pierce returned after Christmas, but Tom Wyatt was out all season because of a knee injury.

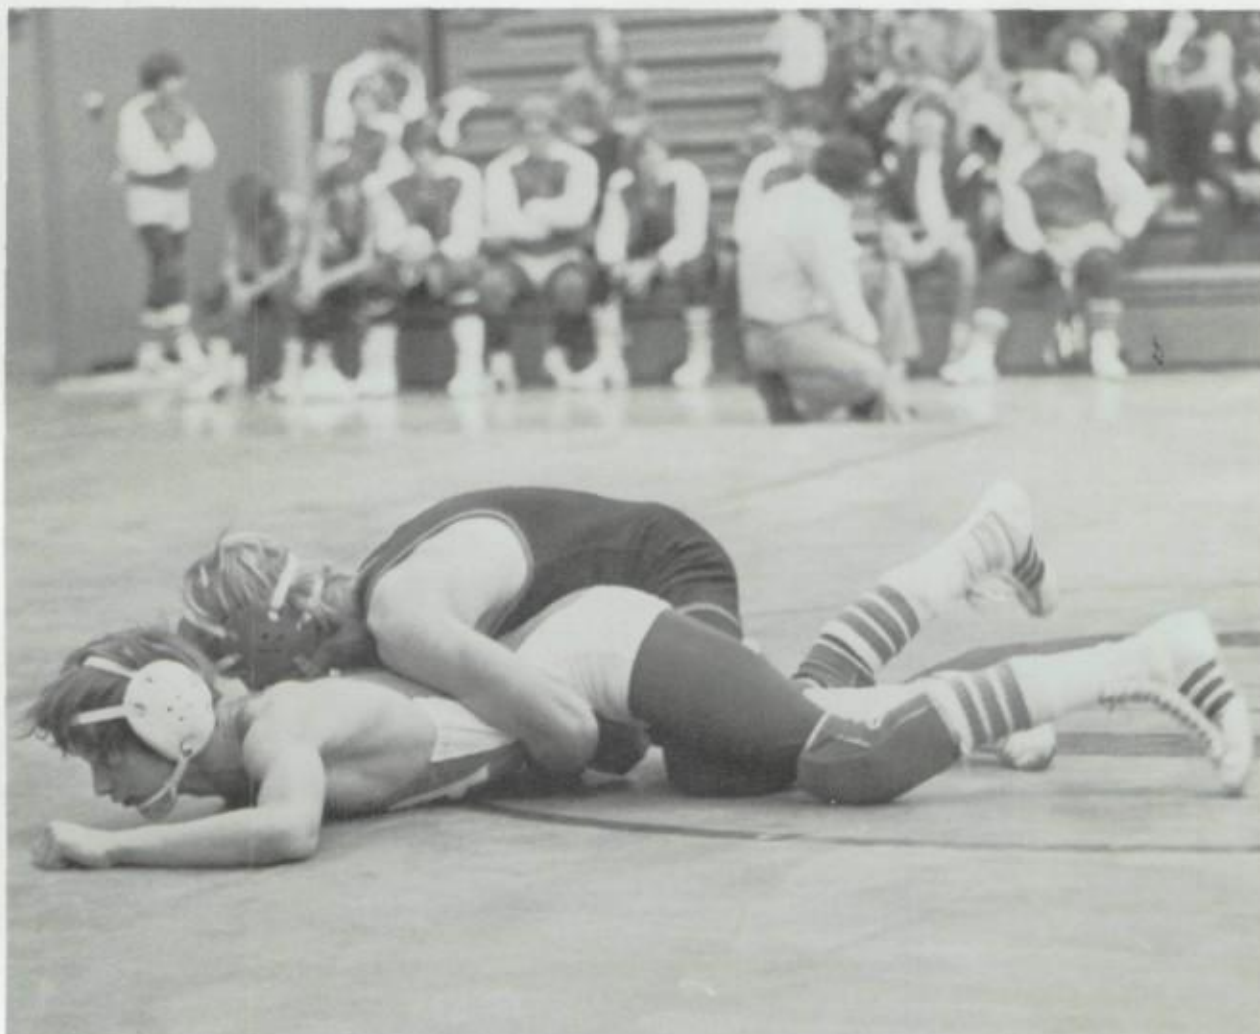

During the Yuma meet the team made a come-back of 30 straight points. "That was because the weights from 145 on up came in. We call ourselves the Animal Train—we're invincible," commented heavyweight Doug Kellermeyer. "No matter how much we were losing by, we pulled it up. We're positive thinkers."

Coach Randy Bishop, who completed his second year as head wrestling coach, said, "The guys were really together and I feel they had a tremendous year."

Senior Jack Dunn and junior Alan Hoover were among top wrestlers from Scottsdale, Apache Junction, and Payson, who were chosen to wrestle the Japanese national champion as part of a cultural exchange. Jack Dunn was one of the few to beat the Japanese champion.

When asked what it takes to win a match, Joel Stitt answered, "I feel that the essence of wrestling is not in the physical realm, but is more a battle of mental ability."

Story by Jim Loofborough

Learning Resource Center Specialist Randy Bishop, history teacher Keith Plummer and substitute teacher Jim Poole worked all wrestling teams together. In Bishop's four years of coaching wrestling, three were spent at Coronado. Plummer has coached wrestling for about 15 years.

David Zuzu was the only freshman to make the Varsity team. Other outstanding freshmen were Terry Baker, Matt Hegarty, and Dan Haskell, who made the Junior Varsity squad.

The wrestlers practiced five days a week for one-and-a-half hours. Their goal was to be No. 1. Practice does not mean just wrestling with one another. Running was a main part of the day. Running distances varied from one-and-a-half to two miles a day. "75 percent of all freshman wrestlers continue on to Varsity or Junior Varsity," claimed Bishop.

The Girls Varsity Badminton Team, during its first year of existence, finished fifth in Divisionals and sixth in State competition.

Badminton was added to the interscholastic sports calendar to comply with Title IX, which requires equal educational opportunities for both sexes. The girls also petitioned to have the sport started. The team practiced beginning Aug. 21 and every day during the fall season.

Players had "challenge matches" to determine their standing as a Varsity, Junior Varsity, or "hopeful" player. "Hopefuls" filled in when JV players were absent.

Varsity team members who went to divisionals were Monica Klett, Susan Marusich, Wynne Hemingway, Sandy Nuneviller, Sandi Kenney, and Lynn Jensen. Sandy Nuneviller and Lynn Jensen played doubles at State, attaining the sixth place ranking for Corona-do.

"I was very proud of the girls, especially because it was their first season," said coach Karen Maglich. "I know that next year's season will be even better."

The Chess team rated "Top Varsity" and "Top JV" teams at the Flagstaff tournament held in November.

Players met regularly for ladder competitions, attended interscholastic tournaments, and hosted the Region III Chess Tournament in January.

The varsity team, included, Kevin Kolasa, David Brown, Carl Orson, Jonathon White, Jeff Johnson, and Ed Takesuye. John Yahraus, Eric Alexander, Kevin Osborn, Charlie Roush, and Victor Weible, make up the JV team. Kevin Kolasa holds the No. 1 rank.

Members of the speech team use varied techniques in presenting their speeches at matches and contests. Junior Susan Leavitt, who has been on the team for two years, does oral interpretation of poetry. Leavitt won second place in the Veterans of Foreign Wars Speech Contest.

Linsy Brewer, senior, is in her second year and does oral interpretations of prose poetry and drama. "She represented Coronado at the State Speech Contest in April."

Sophomore Charlie Roush, in his first year, is an extemporaneous speaker. This is also junior Debbie Cornell's first year on the team. Cornell is an orator.

The team meets before every match to practice their speeches and get comments from their teammates.

ACE sings way to California and back

By Sheryl Ludwig, Sue McCrocklin, Kris Rapp

The Advanced Choral Ensemble (ACE) is the top vocal group in the music department. The group is composed of 13 boys and 14 girls, mainly juniors and seniors, except for two sophomores.

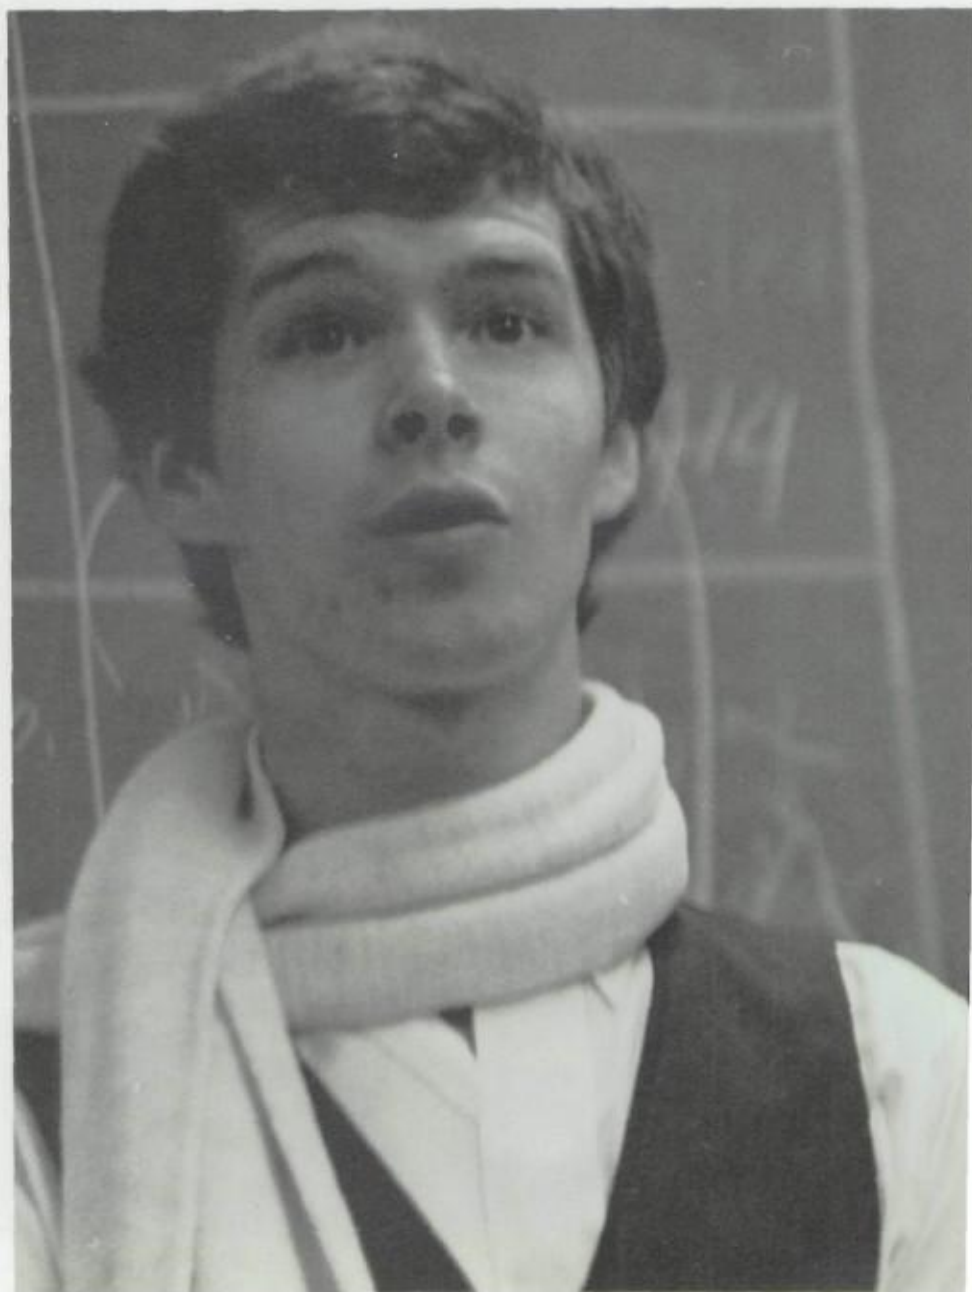

ACE performs fifteen times in a variety of concerts. They took part in a Sing-A-Thon at Los Arcos Mall, for which they received $1,000 which was used to send the members to perform at Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, and the Veterans Hospital during the spring break. Also, they sold approximately 1,000 Christmas Carols, and held a car wash, to raise additional funds.

The members of ACE are under the direction of Harold Millsop who transferred to Coronado after 14 years at Arcadia. "Mr. Millsop has added organization which has been missing for years," said juniors Craig Smith and Mary Jacobs. "He is an excellent musician who helps out in the planning and fund raising activities."

ACE girls changed the original pant outfits to circular skirts that matched the boys rust slacks.

Auditions are required for membership in ACE. Only the top singers are selected to join this choir.

A Korean Choir visited Coronado for a day in January. "The girls of the choir showed great potential," said David Ryder. "They were very determined." David feels that Korea is more advanced in musical training than the United States.

Striving to expand their knowledge and appreciation for music, the Varsity Mixed Chorus, known as the musical group "Choralairs," performed concerts throughout the year. They combined their talent with the Advanced Choral Ensemble (ACE) and the orchestra for their Christmas programs.

Following tradition, the alumni were invited back to sing in the Christmas assembly. Many of the Choralairs participated in the Fine Arts Department's, "Damn Yankees."

Choralairs were directed by Harold Millsop, who came to Coronado after teaching 14 years at Arcadia and 10 years in Pennsylvania. Many of his students intend to pursue musical careers and felt they benefitted from the experience.

The choral group Cantadoras is an all girls varsity chorus. At their formal concerts they performed in assorted pastel-colored gowns.

Kelly Higgins, new director, came to Coronado from Miami, Arizona. Higgins said some reorganization was necessary due to changes in directors the past two years.

Michelle Harris explained, "We've had our problems throughout the year but mostly get along pretty good."

The Band/Orchestra Lettermen Club was founded when the school opened. The members are dedicated to improving their musical skills, along with service to the school. To become a letterman, points must be accumulated through the different activities the individual does.

When Coronado first began, there were no formal dances. The Band/Orchestra Lettermen originally sponsored these dances. Working the concession stand at a football game and Coronado Don's ballpoint pens raised funds for the group.

A new marching banner, approximately eight by three-and-a-half feet, was purchased to replace one that was lost.

Sponsor Eugene Hanson said the band and orchestra parents cooperated with the students and their activities.

Despite rains, Dons band marches on

by Maureen McSpadden

The Dons Marching Band made fewer appearances than in the past. The band, top ranked for years at various band days, did not attend the annual ASU Band Day due to the intense heat.

Rain cancelled several of their shows at football games, but they showed up in their band T-shirts and blue jeans at the Homecoming game for a surprise performance.

The band practiced every school morning for two hours, plus during the summer for four hours each day.

The band was directed by Fine Arts Department Head Eugene Hanson. Assistant director was Kelly Higgins. Field commanders were Dierdra Hanson and Craig Smith; student conductors were Roxanne Blomquist, Chris Connolly, Kay Hansen, and Ruth Solin.

The concert or symphonic band performed at the regular concerts along with the J.V. bands, orchestra and the various choruses.

Top performers were Kay Hansen and Amy Gardner on flute; Ruth Solin and Julie Turrentine on the oboe; clarinets were Cindy Meitzler, Cathy Nelson, Mike Riley, and Mary Striebel. Top French Horn players were Chris Connolly, Craig Smith and Lisa Anderson. Other prominent performers were Christie Bruins, Jim Gates, Todd Hanson, Mitch VonGnetchen and Terri Becker.

The Concert Band is also under direction of Hanson and Higgins.

Instrumentalists excel in state contests

Story by Jenni Levario, Jay Tippeconnic

Instrumentalists from orchestra and band brought back 15 gold and 12 silver medals in State Solo Competition. In the State Ensemble Festival, eight groups were rated superior and four groups were judged excellent. The teacher and conductor was Eugene Hanson.

Orchestra members were selected by private audition at the beginning of the year.

The major portion of orchestra's musical literature was from the classical period. For special events, top chair players from the major sections were combined to form smaller ensembles, such as groups which backed up the musicals "Damn Yankees" and "Kiss Me Kate."

ACE, Cantadores, and the Choralairs, (the vocal performing groups) combined with the Orchestra to present their formal concerts during the span of the year. Los Hermanos and Los Hermanos Auxiliary ushered for the programs.

New director Higgins jazzes up band

Kelly Higgins, formerly of Miami High School (Arizona), was the new jazz band director.

The jazz band not only presented Coronado concerts, but also traveled to elementary schools in the district. During Christmas vacation, they performed at the Children's Colony, a home for the mentally retarded located in Randolph, Arizona. They teamed with ACE (Advanced Choral Ensemble) and orchestra to present three major concerts.

During November, Kay Hansen and David Carter, two senior members of the jazz band, were selected to play in an all-star group which performed for a conference of music teachers held at McClintock High School. Kay Hansen also plays for Young Sounds, a valley all-star jazz band.

"This has been a rebuilding year for several sections," commented Higgins. "The stronger players helped the more inexperienced ones, though."

Selection for jazz band is based on a recommendation from a former music teacher and an audition.

FACES in THE CROWD

By Jeff Bridges

"Top Competitors at Coronado"

Kerry Bogner

Kerry has been into running since grade school and has been on the track team four years. In his freshmen year he became the world record holder for his age group in the two-mile run. He was on the Cross Country Team four years and contributed to the team's winning the State title in '77 and '78. His senior year he set a new state record for the three-mile run at 14:52.3, making him state champion. "I've always tried to enjoy the sport," said Kerry. "People get in high school and tend to break down and be competitive; they're out there to win. That's why I'm glad I have Coach Ryder as a coach. He's a great guy." Kerry added, "I must admit though, the training took more discipline than the running."

Chris has been in Concert band four years, Junior Varsity Band one year, Varsity band three years and Marching Band four years. She won a scholarship to Interlochen Music Camp in '78 and was in Regional Orchestra for three years and All-State band two years. Chris won Superior ratings at the State Solo Festival, winning one silver and two gold medals. Chris is also a member of the Phoenix Youth Symphony.

Chris Connolly

"Along with a fine natural coordination," said Varsity Tennis Coach Karl Woodman. "Bill has shown willingness to work hard enough at the many tennis skills to maintain his position as a very competitive player."

Bill has been playing tennis for four years and received a certificate of recognition for a 14-2 record as a sophomore. Among his other accomplishments was a "Most Improved" trophy for a 13-2 record as a player high on the competitive ladder his junior year; plus, a 2nd place trophy in the West High Tournament in '78.

Bill graduated in the number one position on the tennis ladder. "I love tennis," Bill said. "I love everything about tennis—the running, practice and all. It's really good for you."

Bill Nuneviller

Toni Quijada

Tony has been singing for four years, but only two years in Chorals. "My biggest accomplishment was making ACE (Advanced Choral Ensemble)." She also received a certificate for Regional tryouts.

"I really worked hard and it's very important to me how my singing sounds to others," Tony said.

"Tony is a very responsible and attentive person. She sets a fine example for the younger members to follow," said Harold Millsop, choral director.

"Through dedication and hard work, Bob Winkler has become an outstanding and well known high school baseball player," said head baseball coach, Roy Coppinger.

Bob was awarded a 3-foot trophy for "Most Valuable player" at Summer Camp, was voted "Most Improved Player" at Winter Camp and made Winter Camp All-Star team.

"The baseball coaches have helped me improve so much as a person and player that I wouldn't trade my experiences for anything else," said Bob.

Bob Winkler

Mitch has been playing basketball since fifth grade. He has played four years at Coronado, averaging 20 points per game his senior year. Mitch has accomplished an 80 percent free throw accuracy. He was announced as player of the week over the Christmas holidays.

"I just want to be able to play and do what I like to do," said Mitch.

Mitch Dickerson

Roxanne Bloomquist

Roxanne was in Orchestra four years, Varsity Band three years and Dons Marching Band four years. She was Marching Band President this year. Roxanne is a member of the Scottsdale Community College Orchestra and Band, and Phoenix Youth Symphony.

Roxanne won a silver medal at the State Solo Ensemble in '77 and is a 4-year Band Letterman.

"It's the neatest experience I've ever had, and I wouldn't give up these four years at Mr. Hanson's instruction for anything in the world."

Craig Smith

Craig Smith was in ACE (Advanced Choral Ensemble) his junior year. He participated in the ACE 10-hour sing-a-thon at Los Arcos Mall.

"It was a tiring activity, but I'm pretty happy about it," said Craig.

Craig received Purdue University's "All-American" Hall of Fame Band award which recognizes superior student musicians.

Monica played No. 1 on the badminton team. She lost only to the state champs in singles. She also had the best record of any first year badminton player. Monica started the badminton team last year by petitioning to the student body. She has been a top female athlete since her freshmen year. "The badminton team was a really fun experience," Monica said. "Without the team members there wouldn't be anything. Mrs. Maglich's time and effort made the whole difference."

Monica Klett

Bob Dye

Bob was on the Varsity Football team for three years. He was on Coronado's Championship team in '76 and was outstanding Running Back of '78.

"It's been one of the greatest experiences in my life and football has helped me to be a better person and get along with people better," said Bob.

Diedra Hanson

In the four years Dierdra has spent in Marching Band and Orchestra, she has accomplished Rank Leader, Field Commander of the '78 Marching Dons, received superior ratings for a flute and cello solo at the Regional Band and Orchestra Competitions and is a member of the Phoenix

Youth Symphony and Scottsdale Community College Orchestra. Dierdra received a Northern Arizona University music scholarship and was squad leader her junior year. She was also first cello in Orchestra.

"It's really good background for any future endeavors in music, and luckily, Coronado offers very good opportunities," Dierdra said.

Doug Kellermeyer

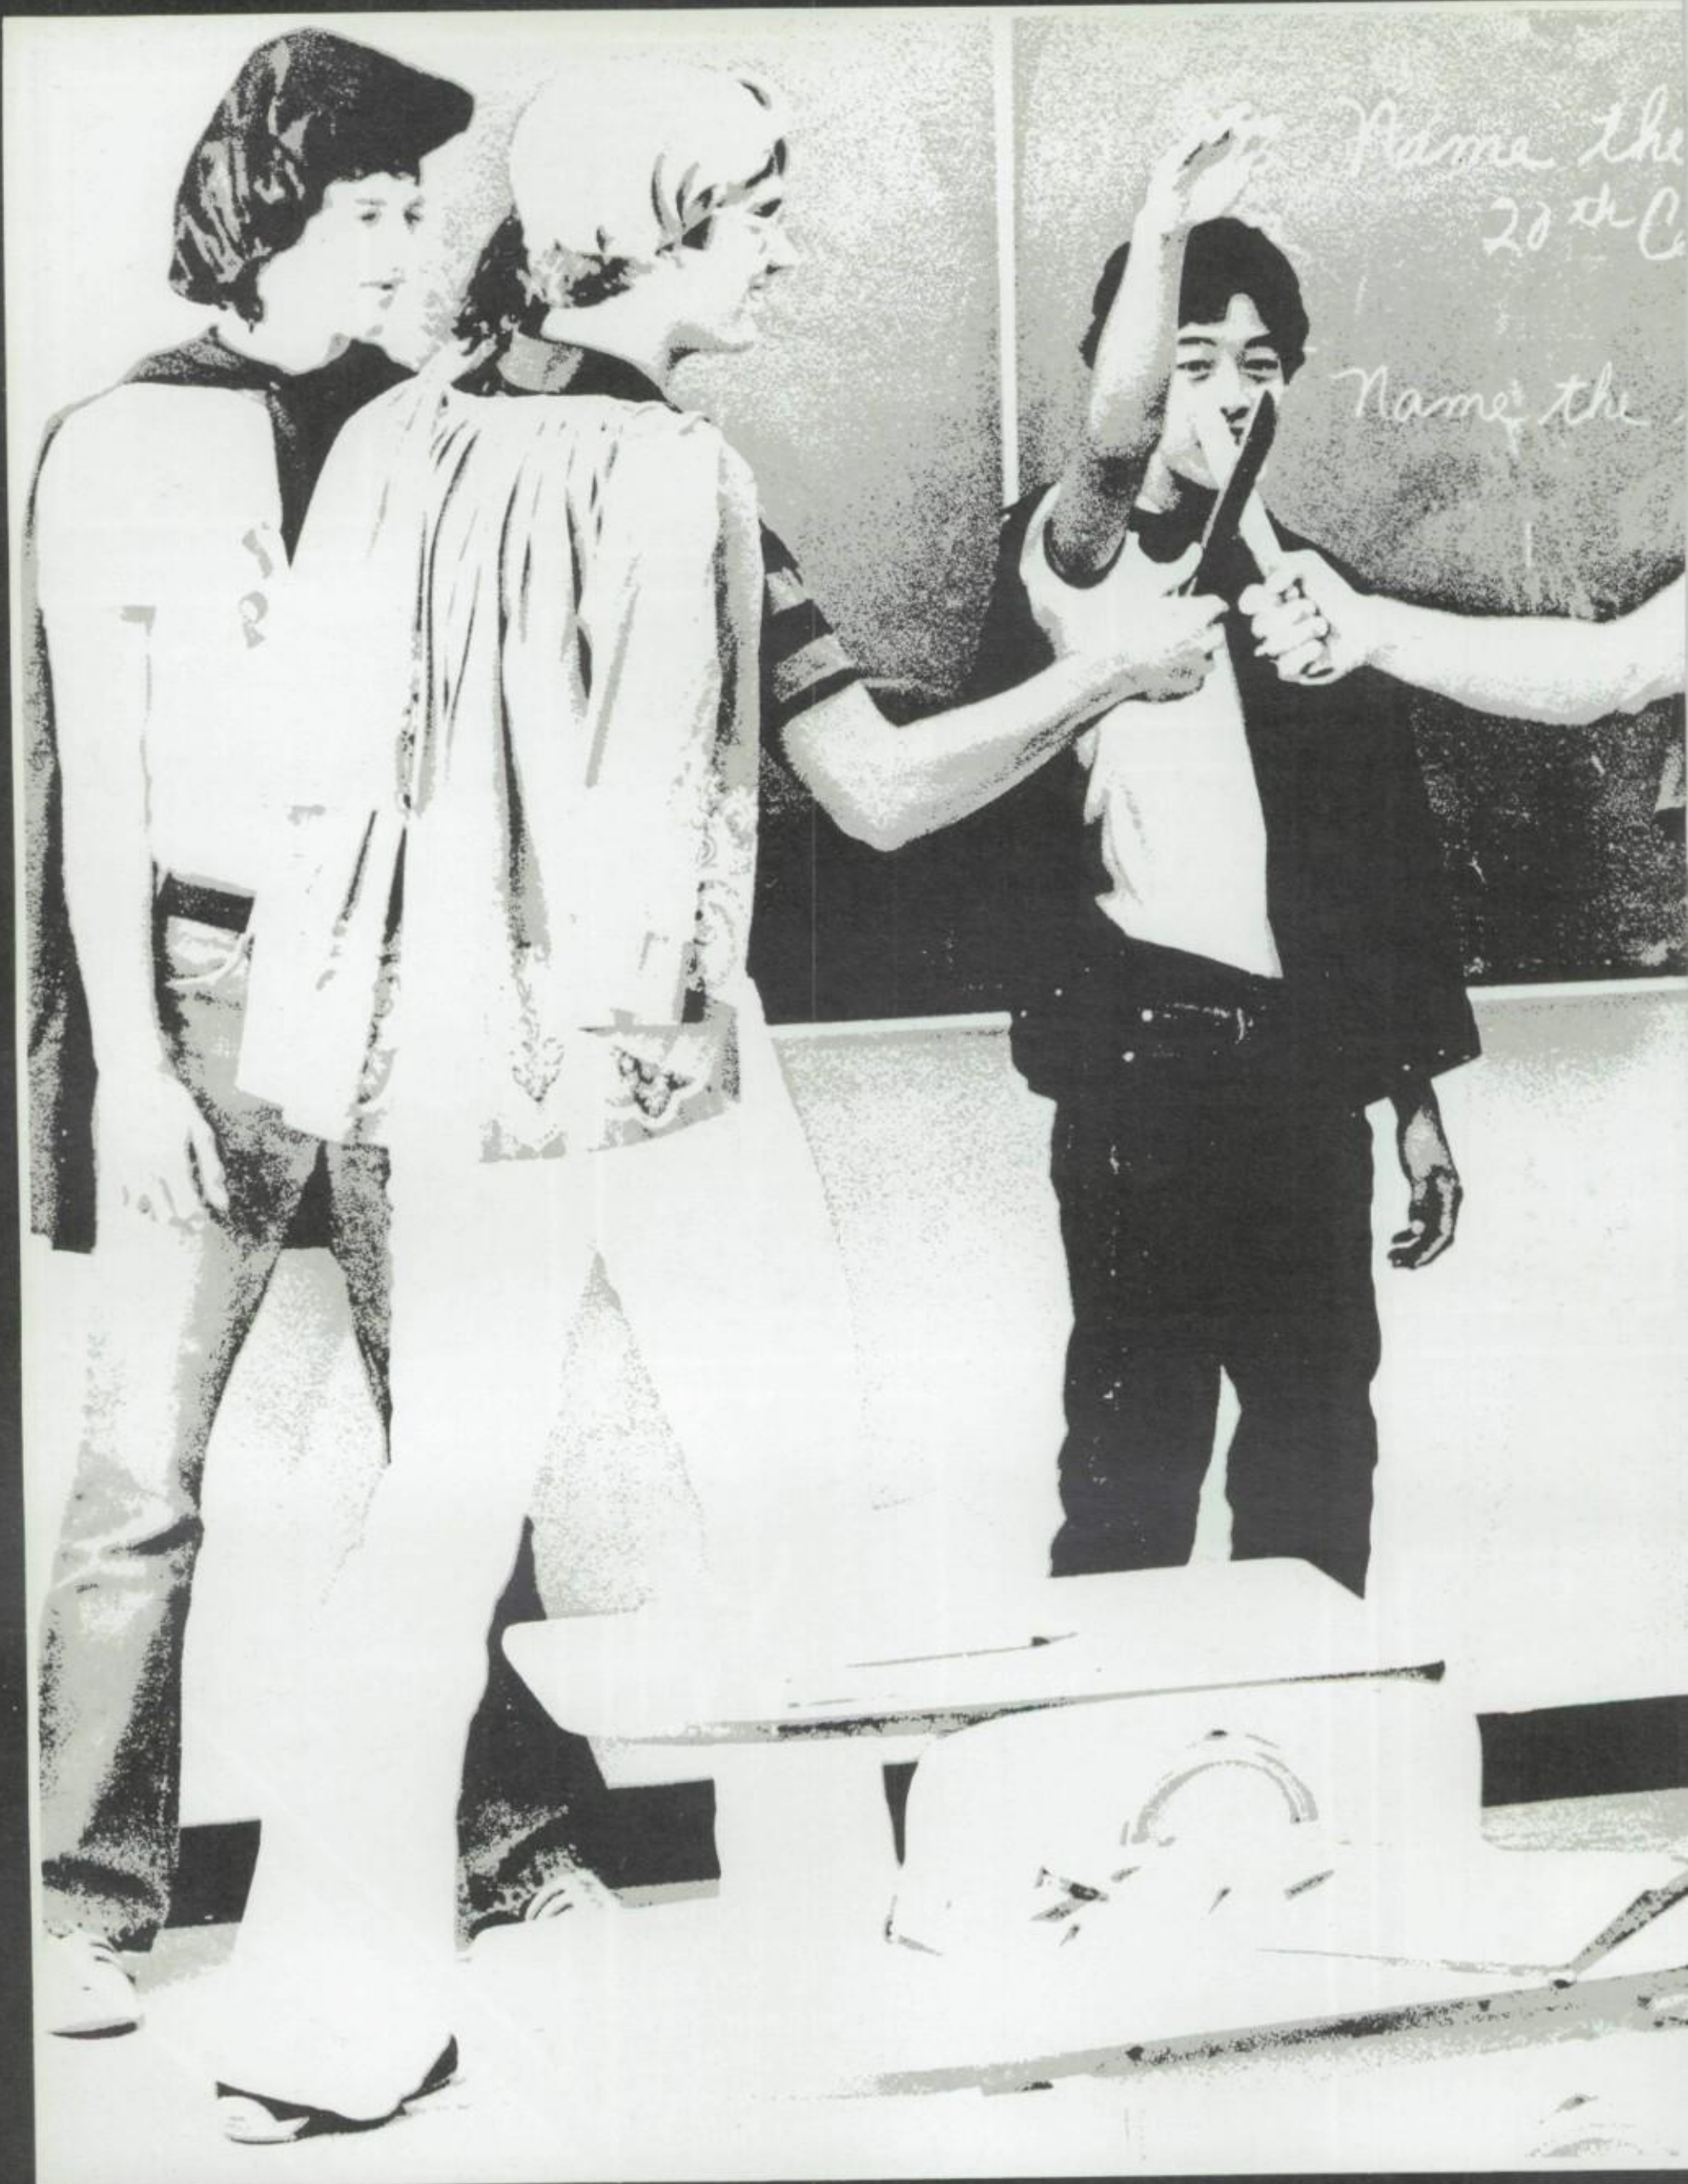

Doug, who has wrestled four years at Coronado, finished the season with a 7-1-1 record.

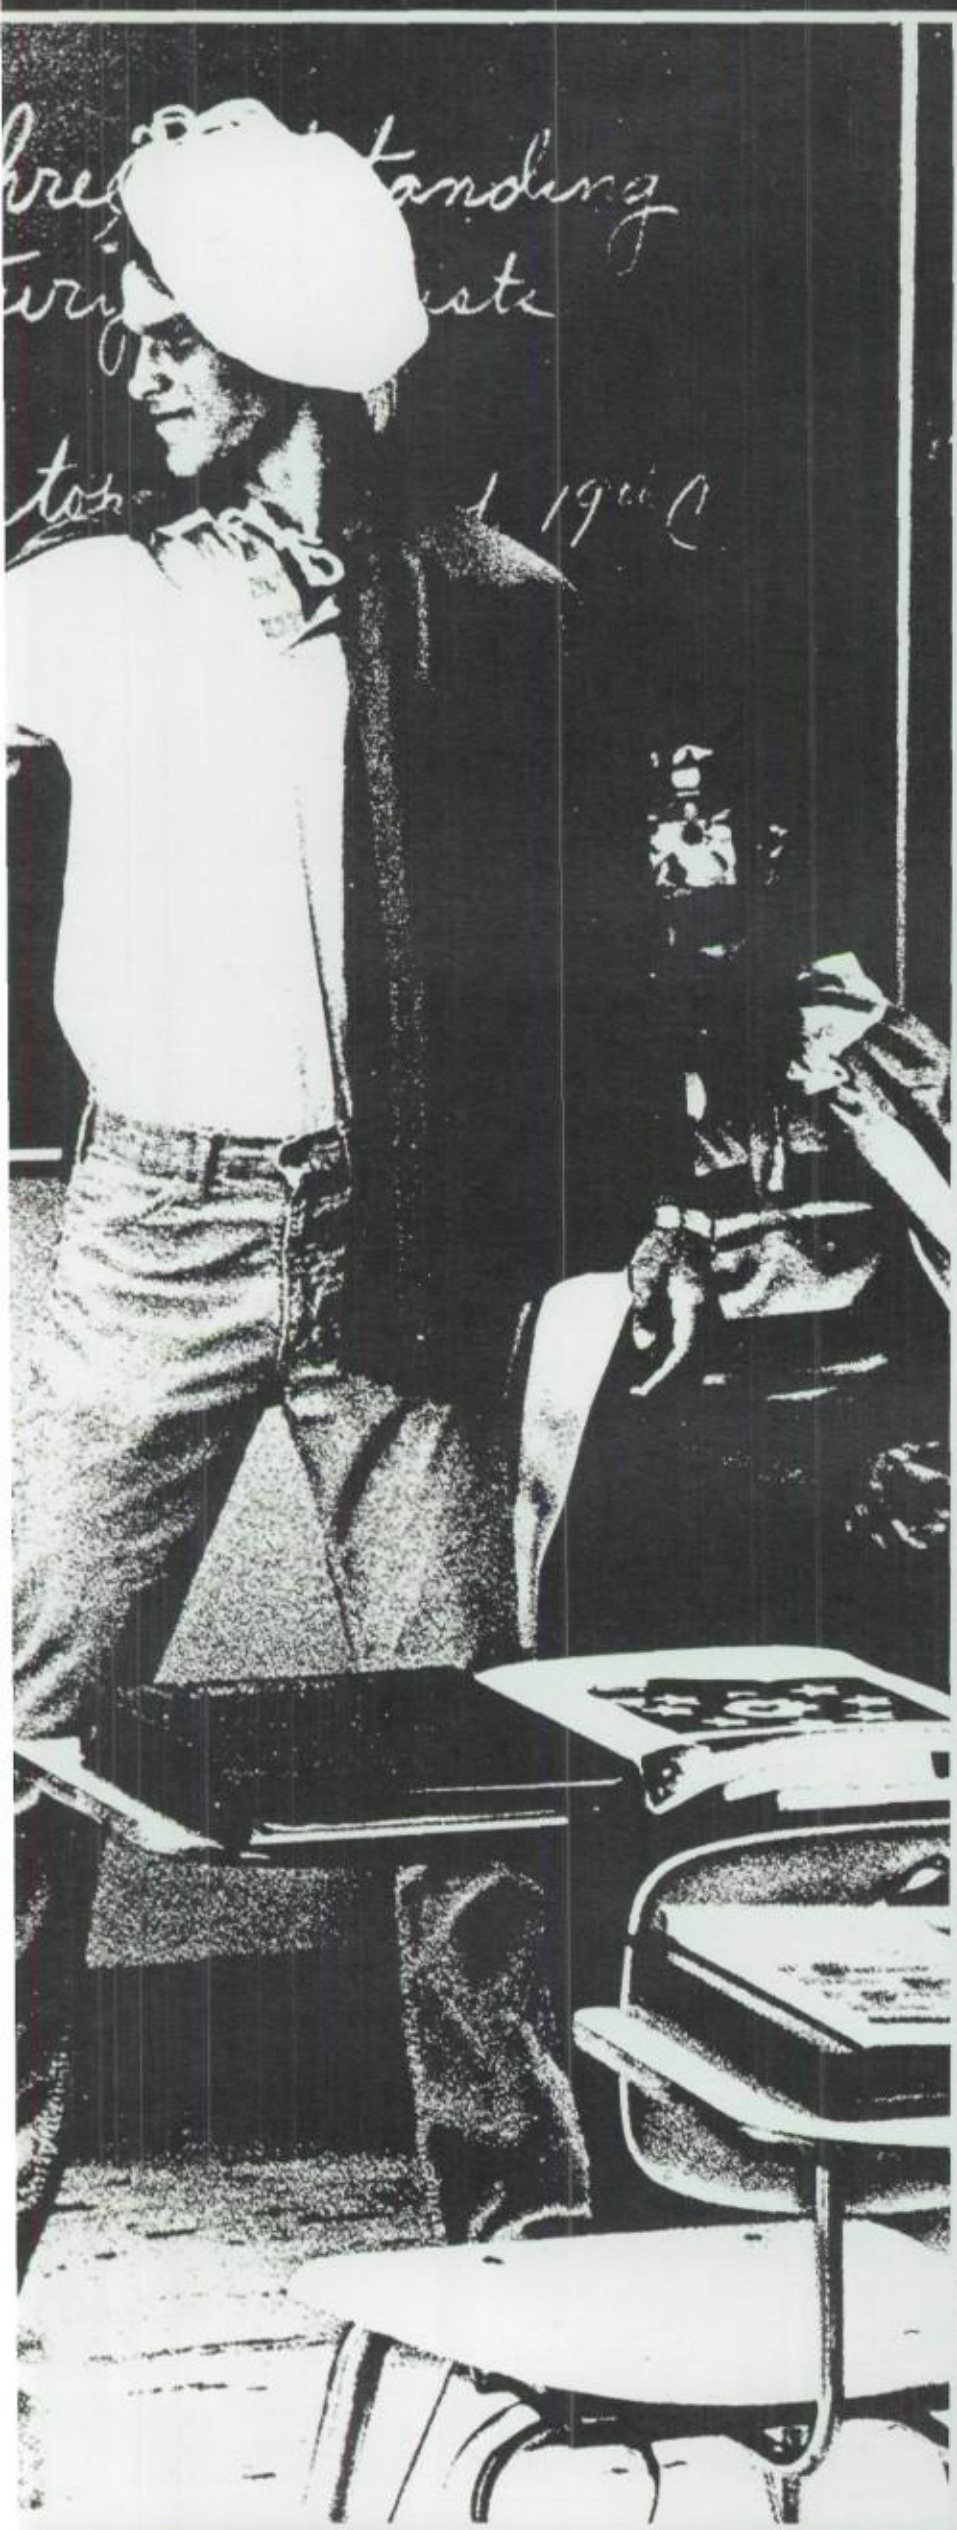

He took third in the Chaparral Wrestling Tournament, and was state heavyweight champion. Doug weighs in at 250 lbs.

"We had a really good team this year", Doug said, "and all of us seemed really close. We worked together as a team and that helps!"

Mind Molders

The biggest thing to hit the educational program was the new "attendance" policy. Attendance is in quotes because it's actually a "cut," "ditch," or "absence," policy.

In the past several years, students were given ten unexcused absences before they were dropped from class. It had been reduced to five, but now four and you're automatically out.

Last year the students had an unlimited amount of excused absences, but since the new policy, you get ten excused absences and the notorious computer drops you.

Through research, I discovered this policy was adapted from those used back East, but it was modified a little.

When talking with William Johnson, assistant principal, he said that about 95 percent of the students follow the policy. The other five percent ignore it, just as they do about anything involving school.

Ed Segrave, assistant principal, said the teachers were very positive with the new policy. "It was the first time I announced something at a beginning-of-the-year meeting and got applause," Segrave chuckled.

I asked some students their opinion on the new program. One student said, "Sometimes it just can't be helped (being absent). And I don't much like being treated like a criminal." Others simply said it was too confining, and even more complained about security guards.

After much controversy over the program the ten absences policy was dropped. Students could have indefinite excused absences.

This new aspect to the school has greatly affected my section. It's a great way to introduce the new name of this section—MIND MOLDERS.

Board, administrators head school affairs

By Cathy Boyd

Four elected representatives of the Scottsdale community make up the official Trustees of the Unified (elementary and secondary) School District. The annual School Board election held Nov. 7 resulted in Sue Doggett and incumbent Richard Clark filling the two vacancies being sought by Judy Skinner, Ed Baumgart, Doggett and Clark. The 1978 members were President Donald Swanson, Tom Carey, Phyllis Spencer, Richard Clark, and Paul Streich. Striech did not run for re-election when his term expired. Doggett and Clark were seated on the board Jan. 14.

"We represent and interpret the desires of the community," said Don Swanson, 1978 President of the board.

"The Board does directly affect the student's daily life," said Dr. William Randall, Superintendent of Scottsdale Public schools. "The Board can be greatly impressed with a student's well-laid-out presentation." The Coronado student representative to the Board is Senior Mike Mall.

Randall and Dr. Philip Gats, assistant superintendent of secondary education, are full-time administrators in the district to carry out policies for the board.

Four administrators handle the many details of running Coronado's academic and extracurricular program. Principal Robert Hendricks was involved in the new attendance policy, making additions to the curriculum, and the advanced placement program. Hendricks said teachers expressed concern about bringing more order to the campus without coming down too hard on students.

Associate Principal William Johnson's main concern was counseling with parents and students about their problems. He handled student activities such as Student Council, Athletics, and Clubs.

Assistant Principal Dr. Ed Segrave was kept busy with the new attendance policy. When Attorney General Jack LaSota's opinion challenged the policy, Segrave was involved in deciding what revisions should be made.

Dr. James Carey, assistant principal of educational services, said his biggest concern since he transferred to Coronado from Arcadia, was trying to develop the best possible class schedule for each student.

A new computer was brought to Coronado to make the clerical job less complicated for the attendance staff and the teachers.

The computer automatically dropped students when the limit of absences was reached. Previously, teachers had to keep these records and make reports.

When a student was absent from school, the parent had the responsibility of calling in to the attendance office. Attendance clerks typed the excuse into the computer, along with the list the teacher sent at the end of the day. The following day the teachers received lists of only students absent in their own classes instead of a list of absences in the entire school.

The attendance policy was modified throughout the entire Scottsdale School District. After one excused absence, the teacher spoke with the student. Two unexcused absences, the school contacted the parents. After the third unexcused absence, the administration contacted the parents and warned them of impending withdrawal. Four unexcused absences and the student was no longer enrolled in the class.

Dr. Ed Segrave, assistant principal, said there were a few flaws in the new policy that had to be corrected as the year progressed.

With more than 2700 students enrolled, each counselor was responsible for approximately 300 students. "The counselor is responsible for assisting all students with their developmental needs, academic, vocational and personal problems," stated June Anderson, department chairperson. "Counselors are also available to help with the many crises which may come into young people's lives."

Anderson was the Senior Class sponsor and co-sponsor of Medical Careers club. She enjoys working with students on an individual basis. Helping young people make responsible choices regarding their lives is very challenging and rewarding to her. Anderson says she enjoys making her students become aware of themselves.

"I love my job. Each day is different, and each student I see is unique and special in some way," she expressed.

Anderson first earned a Bachelor of Arts in Education. While she was teaching at Hohokam Elementary School, she worked towards her Masters Degree and Counseling Certificates. Eight years ago she came to Coronado as a counselor.

Counselor Don Butler enjoys all sporting events including sailing, flying and hot-air ballooning. He is an Independent Study Director for private pilots and is an FAA Flight Instructor. He is also the military liaison for the Guidance Department. Eugene Privett plays the fiddle and guitar. He also enjoys golf.

Tom Salcito, who was here seven years, left the Guidance Department this year at the beginning of school. He was transferred to Chaparral. Also, due to low enrollment, Adrienne Selbst was transferred to Saguaro Nov. 1. She had been at Coronado eight years.

The Scottsdale Vocational Center opened its doors in 1973. The center was set up to develop programs that focus on long-range vocational and technical career goals. The students choose programs that interest them. The training they receive prepares them for employment after high school.

The center requires all students to be a junior or 16, 6 months old. They must have a personal interview with the course instructor before enrolling. Satisfactory attendance and conduct are required.

The Vo Tech includes auto body repair, auto tune-up and refrigeration, aviation maintenance, commercial art, cosmetology, health services and welding.

The curriculum includes textbook study and practical experience through actual practice. Students approach their work as if they are in a real-life situation in the field.

After 400 hours of hard work and practice, a student is eligible for certification. The placement counselor, Walt Headley, attempts to find employment for graduates if the students request.

One Vo Tech graduate said she enjoyed Vo Tech because she could choose the classes she wanted according to her personal interests. "The knowledge I gained is very practical and will help me in future employment as well as with every day life," she said.

Scottsdale Vo Tech is taught daily at the Vocational Center located on the campus of Scottsdale High. All Scottsdale schools participate in the program. Students study at Vo Tech three hours a day and attend their regular classes at their own school the remainder of the day. The district provides transportation from each high school.

A decrease in enrollment and cuts in the budget meant that few changes were made in the English department.

In explaining the developmental reading program, English Department head Richard Hughes said, "The developmental reading program is not only for people who have reading disabilities." He went on to say, "It is an improvement course for anyone to better his reading skills."

In the area of accelerated English, Thelma Wortmann, teacher of English IIA, says teachers are working harder to make the "A" classes more of an enrichment course to help prepare the student for college.

Three sections of Basic Photography were added to Gerri Fielder's journalism schedule to provide instruction for publications photography, as well as to open up career or hobby interests to all students in all areas of the school.

Virginia Eades' second and third period English Literature classes staged their annual Shakespeare play during September. The class performed the play in the room, with costumes and all, instead of just reading it, because Eades felt "the students get more out of the material if they act it out themselves."

Sheila English's American Literature classes visited El Dorado Park in September while they studied Colonial times and hardships. They prepared a cookout in the park which included such food as Apple pan dowdy, succotash, clam chowder, sour dough bread, pumpkin bread, red flannel hash, Johnny cakes, apple pie and corn pudding.

Social studies teachers tour foreign lands

When asked what it was like to live in the "bush," Virginia Waterman replied, "It was quite civilized; the hotels and foods were very good."

Waterman spent fifteen days during the summer visiting the National Parks and Wildlife refuges in Kenya in East Africa. The trip was to review and photograph the wildlife and learn about the social behavior of the animals. Waterman and her group saw and photographed fifty various types of animals.

Kenya wasn't the only place visited by one of the staff. Dorothy Janca, was one of twenty teachers from the United States chosen to tour India.

Nepal, Kalmandu, Kashmir, Bombay, Bangalore, and Dehli were a few places Janca and the other teachers toured. The trip was to acquaint American Social Studies teachers with India.

During her trip she rode an elephant and a camel, participated in a pooja ceremony, and smoked with a holy man. She also met the United States ambassador and had a two-hour meeting with the Prime Minister.

Closer to home, the students of Coronado again had the chance to participate in Operation Close-Up. The program provided an opportunity for high school students and teachers to experience government in action, through first-hand examination of government, and how to effectively participate in it.

Role playing and discussing the possibility of the future of a Youth Center, was one project Jay Kules Urban Problems Classes performed.

The students put themselves in the roles of merchants, concerned parents, teenagers and various other roles. They discussed whether to have the center and where it should be built if they decided to go through with the plans. They discussed the problems it would cause and the benefits that would come from it. The students had an official meeting with a mediator, timing the meeting and taking charge when things got noisy.

"The role playing helped put the students in a semi-real situation, and I felt it would help them make their own decisions later on in life," Kules expressed.

Special programs serve individual needs

By Mila Clift

Special Services encompasses counseling and learning situations outside the regular classroom programs. The programs and specialists giving help are the Learning Resource Center, a psychologist, a hearing therapist, a career counselor, reading specialist, an Indian education counselor. The library (see pages 134-135) and guidance counselors (see pages 118-119) are also considered special services.

Learning Resource Center. The Learning Resource Center (LRC) assists students having trouble in a regular classroom because of learning problems in one or more areas.

Twelve teachers and aides in the center work with each student one hour a day on a one-to-one basis, supplementing regular textbooks with film viewers, audio-visual equipment and other learning aids.

Where handwriting is a problem, students practice typing to produce more legible assignments. They also work at the chalk board to develop motor skills needed for small hand movements.

Where reading is a problem, students listen through headphones to gain information through their auditory senses.

Students can refer themselves to the LRC program or faculty members can recommend a student for special help. A special educational team evaluates students. If the team feels a student can benefit from special help, with parent and student consent, the student can be enrolled.

Reading Program. The Reading Center, located in the 100 English building, handles students at all levels who need to improve reading skills. For freshmen who test below 9.0, a non-credit reading course is required, in addition to the regular freshmen English class.

Through the federally funded Title I program, freshmen are offered reading skills taught by Carolyn Messer; Reading Improvement is instructed by Mickie Doyle and Linda Kearns; Developmental Reading I & II is for sophomores through seniors to improve reading abilities and speed. Kathryn Lowe, reading coordinator, tests all incoming freshmen and new students.

Psychologist. School psychologist Janeen Groseth's office is open to students seeking professional help with emotional or psychological problems. She also handles unofficial reports from students, teachers, parents, counselors and administrators, and makes referrals to community workers or agencies. She organizes the committee for placement of students in special educational programs.

Hearing Impaired. Linda Erb, hearing therapist, is in the resource room for the hearing impaired, which was initiated in the fall.

Six deaf freshmen spend three hours a day in the resource room with Erb and hearing aide Sandy Schopper. The remainder of the day the deaf students attend regular classes with the hearing therapist as interpreter.

Career Education. Robert Gallagher, career education aide, stocks the Career Center with an abundance of information on choosing and planning careers, as well as gaining entrance to college or the armed forces.

Gallagher also sets up field opportunities in areas of special interests to students. She schedules speakers which bring students firsthand information on career opportunities.

Indian Education. The Indian Education Program handles educational needs of all students of Indian descent. The program offers tutoring, counseling, information on Indian history and culture, field trips and financial aid.

Continuation School. "It's a challenging, but gratifying program," said Don Vansant, instructor in the school. Continuation School, a small one-room schoolhouse in the South building at El Dorado Park, is an alternative means of education for students in the five Scottsdale high schools.

The school helps erase academic deficiencies and attempts to develop satisfactory attitudinal adjustments to school life. There are no formal classes. Students work on a one-to-one basis with an instructor on the courses they were studying in their regular school program.

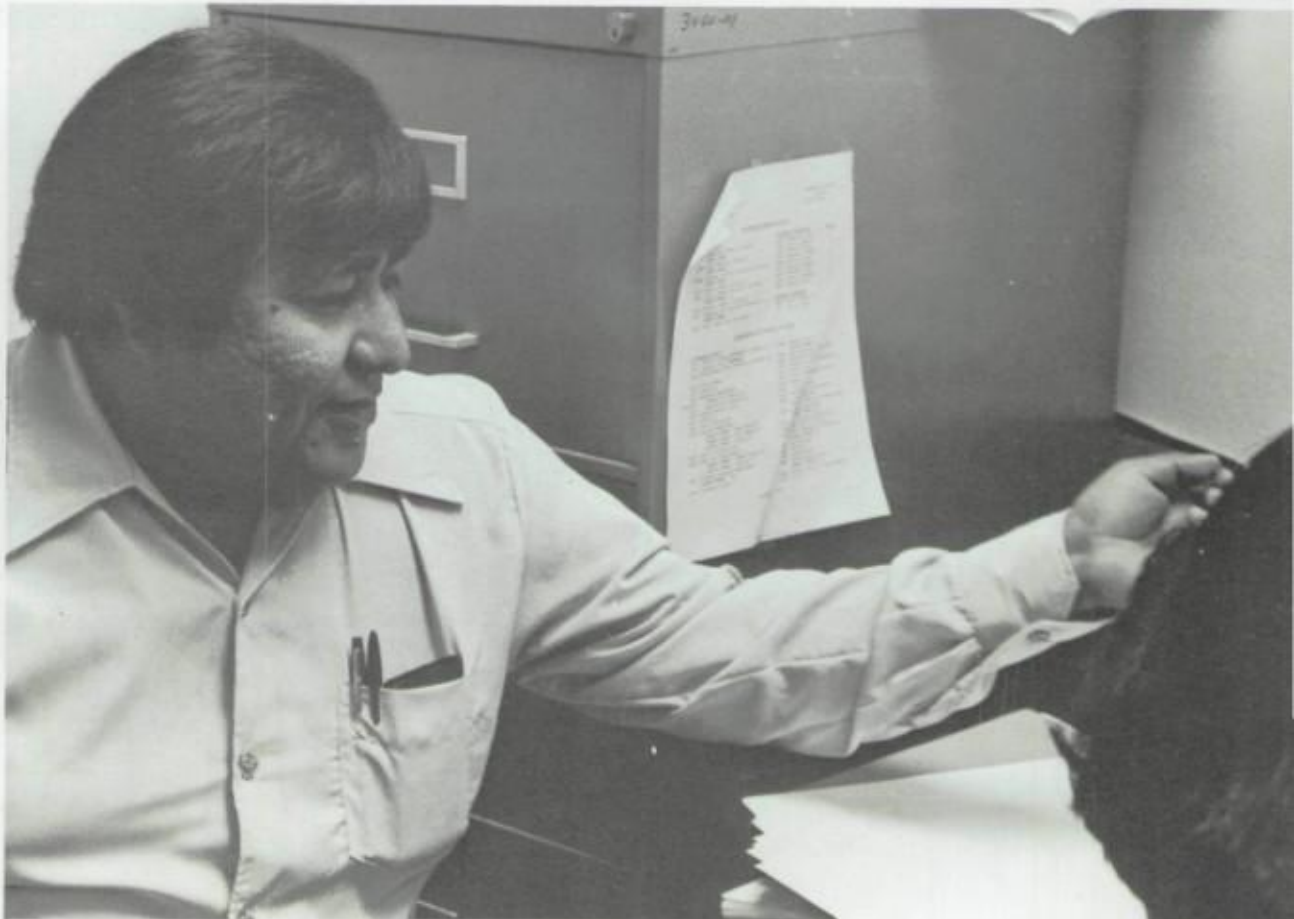

Students are referred to the program by the teachers and administrators when the school record shows excessive absences or problem behavior.

Two sessions of 15 students meet three-and-a-half hours a day. Promptness, satisfactory attendance and good conduct are required from all students. The instructors of the school are Jack Rouse and Don Vansant. Ed Segrave, assistant principal at Coronado, is supervisor of the program for the entire Scottsdale District.

The math department remained basically the same in its offering. Thirteen teachers (two part-time) taught all levels of high school math from Computational Skills (Basic Math) to Calculus AP.

Consumer math has been redesigned to give seniors an opportunity to master their basic math skills before graduation. Career-oriented math, applied math, and consumer-related math have been integrated into the skills program.

The department received a new computer grading machine which enables students in the Computer Programming classes to gain experience by grading tests given to freshmen in the English classes. Some students in the Computer Programming classes spent all summer at school working on programs.

"I would recommend the course to anyone whose main interest is math," said junior Dan Hammond. "I like it because it's challenging for me, and because I understand it, it's easy for me."

Actual experience stresses health, safety

Driver training

In drivers education program, students learned the basics of driving. They also improved their driving abilities and skills in certain situations and under various circumstances.

Films and driver simulation machines aided the students in learning these driving skills. The simulation films put the students under pretend situations such as night driving, driving in storms and wet weather, driving in rural and urban areas, and in emergency situations. Some first aid and first aid procedures were also taught.

Driver education instructor Darrell Symann said the classes were to develop attitudes of the students to help them become safe and defensive drivers. Other driver education teachers were Lehman Cook and James Poplawski.

Behind the wheel training gives the students actual experience behind the wheel with a qualified instructor. This experience helps students pass their road test to receive their Arizona drivers licenses. Charlie Rossie Ford supplies the school with new demonstrators for student practice.

Bookstore

All money relating to school functions such as extracurricular activities, athletics, and clubs, is handled by the bookstore.

School supplies including pens, pencils, paper, rulers, folders and books, are also sold in the campus store for students' convenience. The store personnel are Anita Melius, and Miriam Wright, Manager.

Health education

Lehman Cook's health classes are designed to make students aware of their own health and outside situations concerning or affecting their health.

"This course mainly originated because of young people's problems today," commented Cook.

Alcohol, drugs, tobacco, first aid, sexuality, mental health, common diseases, nutrition, consumer health and some dental aspects of health are the topics.

The class is taught through films, speakers, classroom paper and bookwork and charts.

Science classes decompose 'junk food'

By Mila Clift

While James Ryder's Physics classes worked on Galileo's law of gravity, biology classes sat in the new lecturing room absorbing all the stimulating information the teachers expelled. The teachers felt it would be easier for one teacher to lecture the classes than all the teachers to lecture their classes numerous times a day.

Dr. Sonnie Stevens', Intro to Physical Science (IPS) classes worked in pre-chemistry atmosphere of lab five days a week. They also had separation labs, which included decomposing "junk food" such as potato chips and candy, and determining the percentage of sugar and flavoring ingredients.

Using proper lab procedures, the students made consumer products which consisted of toothpaste, lipstick, hand soap, cold cream, shaving lotions and household cleaners. The products were given as Christmas gifts by the students.

Employees from Arizona Public Service Palo Verde Nuclear Power Plant came to school to inform the students about the plant. They also went on a field trip to the plant in March.

Campus improved by paint crew, maintenance men

By Mila Clift

Coronado put on a new face this year.

The district paint crew renewed the exterior of the buildings. It was the first time since Coronado's opening in 1961 that a building make-over has been done.

Three new wheelchair ramps were installed by the district. One is in front of the auditorium and the others are leading to the Home Economics and Industrial Arts rooms.

A sump pump in the snack bar eliminated the problem of standing water between the snack tables during the rainy weather.

Jim Pence and Herb Smith are some new maintenance personnel that work on Coronado's grounds to keep them looking neat.

Ever wonder what happened to those wonderful days when students could visit the snack bar between every class?

A problem-solving session by teachers early in the year identified difficulties related to food sales. Eating and spilling food in class and tardiness were two reasons for closing the snack bar between classes.

Snack bar windows only opened before school, after school and during lunches. They even closed the fifteen minutes between the two lunches. If students were late for lunch, no munch!

Prices were a big concern to both students and the food service manager Peggy Nienaber. According to Nienaber, emphasis was on nutrition. "We raised Coke prices and kept the fruit juices down at the risk of losing money," she explained.

When asked about the new snack bar hours, one student commented, "Keeps me from getting fat."

Books. Books. Books. History-minded students, poetic-minded students, and any student wishing, can broaden one's horizons with books. Now Coronado has even more to choose from. The library has purchased 1,500 new books, plus some new magazine titles to add to the reference section. They include such selections as Americana, Stereo Review, and International Wildlife Magazine.

Along with new books, the library installed two new electric typewriters for student use. They were put in carrells to muffle the sound. There is no time limit, but the library does ask when the students use the typewriters that they know how to type.

Covering the walls of the library is students art—pencil sketches, paintings and photography. They were displayed in the show case, not to mention the mural donated by the art classes of 1974.

Have a foreign affair; become bilingual

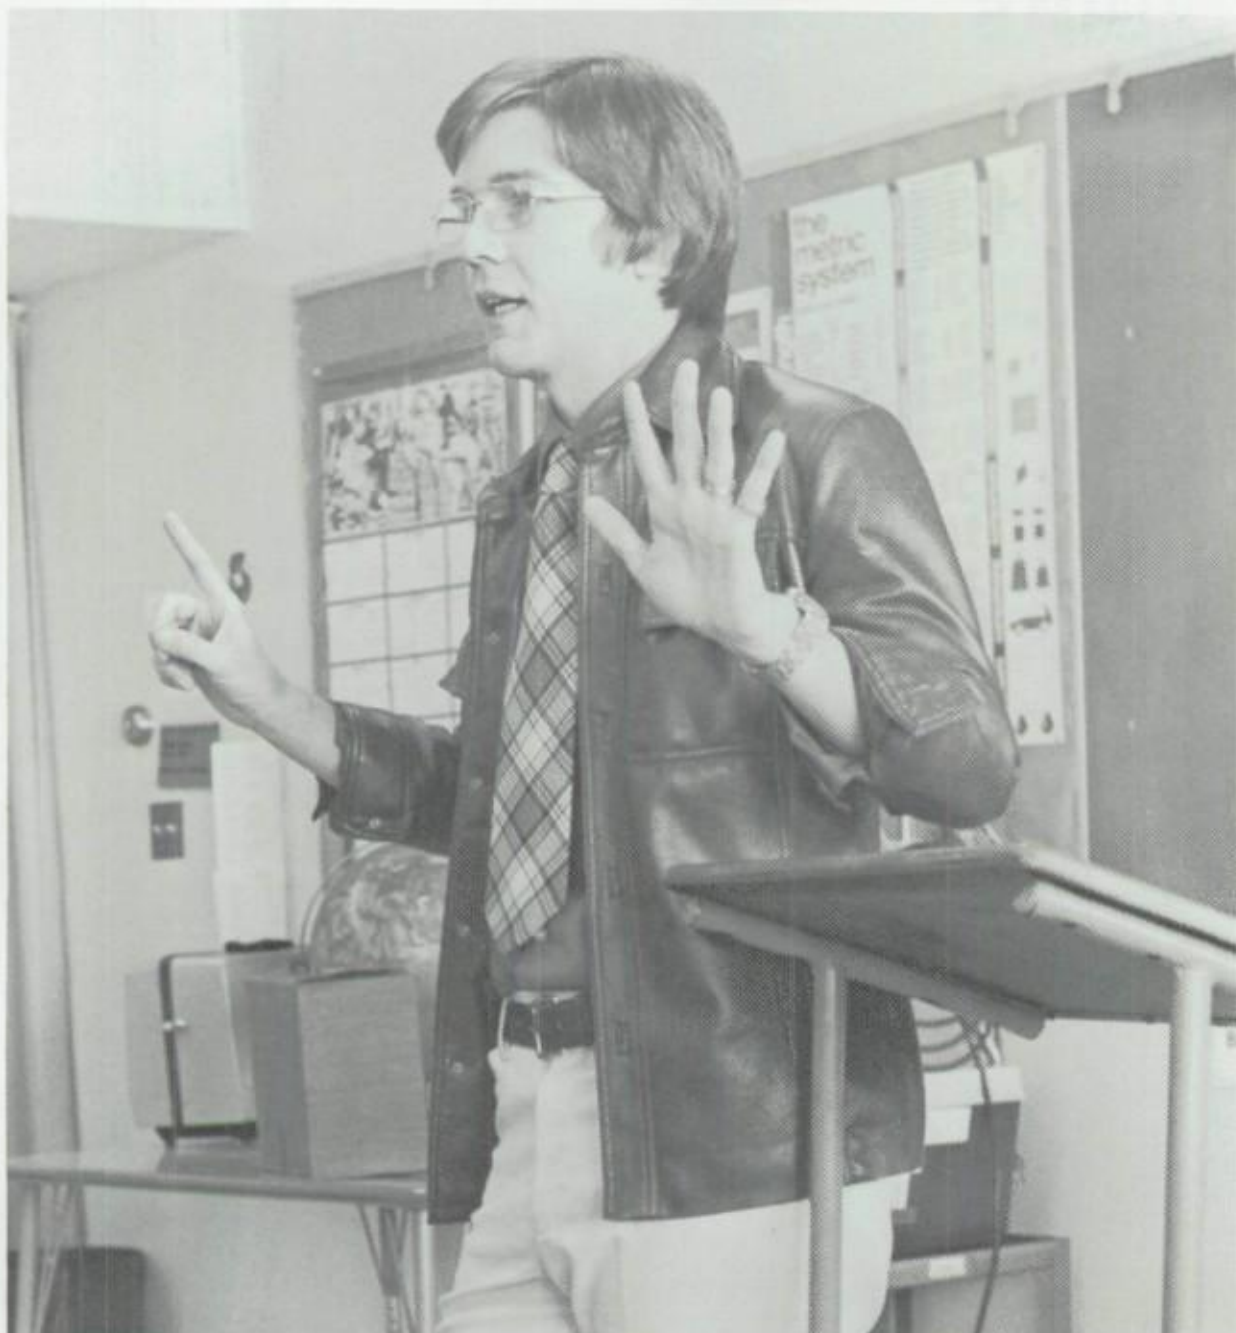

By Chris Boillot

The five-member foreign language department consists of two foreign-born teachers. Barbara Dabrowska, the department head, is from Germany; Marie Haradon, the French teacher, is a native of France. Cheryl Steiner, a new Spanish teacher, transferred from Arcadia; Sheila English and Elizabeth Gorsuch are the other Spanish teachers.

In a specially designed laboratory, students listened to speakers recorded in the language being studied. The lab was also used by teachers to record students reciting a lesson. These recordings were played back to help students correct mistakes.

Coronado offers a four-year program for each of the three languages. "A foreign language helps you to understand our language as well as theirs," said Dabrowska.

Singing Christmas carols in the language they were studying was one of the highlights for the foreign language students. On Career Day guest speakers lectured about the job advantages of being bilingual. Travel agents, secretaries, scientists, and public relations people benefit from foreign language study.

Industrial Arts creates useful projects

By Chris Boillot

Building tables, making cabinets, tuning cars and repairing television sets were skills the Industrial Arts classes accomplished during the year.

Courses were geared to all levels of ability. Beginning students mastered the basic skills; advanced students were given the opportunity to improve their skills and use their creativity.

For example, electronics students ordered kits for construction of remote control cars or portable radios.

In metals, students created decorative tables, lamps, shelves, hammers, and screwdrivers.

Some of the more advanced students from woods and electronics combined the two techniques to make their own speaker systems.

Industrial Arts served both boys and girls for the past few years. Even though there are still few girls, out of the courses offered woods has the most enrolled.

New faces appeared in the Security Department. Roy Glasco, Mae Manthey and Dave Rash joined the staff. Barbara Cassatt and Joe Hennessey were the returning security guards.

"Security is here to help people, not to harass them," expressed Hennessey. His contacts were with only about three to five percent of the students.

With these students only a handful ever gave any problems.

One of security's main jobs was to keep non-students off campus and to stop vandalism.

The Health Center screened freshmen for vision, hearing, height, weight and scoliosis. If any problems were detected, they were followed up closely.

Immunization for all students was encouraged by the State Health Department. Under a new program, which will become law at the end of the year, students were discouraged from entering school if they have not received vaccinations for measles, mumps, rubella and polio.

Play interpreted for hearing impaired

By Linda Coulson

"We run a business here in the Fine Arts Department," explained Eugene Hanson, department head and director of Advanced Marching Band, Varsity Concert Band, and Orchestra. In further describing the department, Hanson explained, "We're always working on some production, and that keeps us all busy. We also try to get the students to broaden their horizons and to open up and develop their creativity."

The first production performed by the drama branch of the Fine Arts Department was "Story Theatre." The play, directed by Debbie Howell, was a collection of Grimm's fairy tales and Aesop's fables. It was interpreted for the hearing impaired. "Story Theatre" opened up the drama season in November. Howell says, "We have consistently high quality productions and well disciplined performers."

situation in the classroom.

Cindy Austin, junior, placed eighth in the nation in an essay contest on "What Music Education Means To Me."

The first choral concert for Choralairs and Cantadoras, two of Coronado's choral groups, opened in November. Coronado acquired a new vocal music director, Harold Millsop, who formerly taught at Arcadia High School

During the month of December, the Art Club's special project was featured at Los Arcos Mall. The display, "Christmas Is . . .," was made from body casts, much like last year's creation, and was supervised by art teacher Joseph Gatti.

The Coronado Marching Band did not participate in the competitions at Arizona State University. The band did, however, participate in the Greater Arizona Invitational Band and Orchestra Festival in May. This was a "Concert type festival," according to Hanson.

Carol Erwin's Independent Living classes have changed from previous years, in that the students are more self-reliant on class projects.

To start off the year, students chose a career, found an apartment and learned to budget their lives around their career.

The classes had many labs in food preparation, such as making sandwiches, chicken and casseroles. Following labs the students made a complete meal.

With each meal Erwin had the students set the table so they could practice proper etiquette.

To familiarize students with the new method for microwave cooking, the Home Economics department purchased a microwave oven.

"The handball/racquetball classes have worked out beautifully," said Roy Coppinger, head of the Physical Education Department. He went on to say, "The courts have been a big boost to the P.E. program and are used by the entire community." The courts were constructed in late spring last year from funds provided by the Economic Development Administration in Washington. The funds were to be divided between three schools. Handball/racquetball was the only new class added to the P.E. program.

District Physical Fitness tests were given early in the year, and again in the spring to test for improvement in physical condition. "The kids seemed to enjoy it and rated pretty high nationally," stated Coppinger.

Three basic divisions made up the Physical Education Department. Each covered many different sports areas, but varies the emphasis. An activity oriented P.E. program considered mainly the fun aspect of sports and put less emphasis on fitness. Testing covered the rules of the games. Fitness oriented P.E. concentrates on the physical fitness aspect of P.E. with tests given to measure skills. The third program gives students the choice of just one sport for a full semester. These courses include tennis, handball/racquetball, gymnastics, weight lifting, diving, golf, and archery.

ONE Seniors Casey Orlowski and Craig Pritchert challenge each other in a game of racquetball in their first hour P.E. class. This is the first year racquetball was offered as a regular class.

THREE Roy Coppinger's fourth hour weightlifting class consists of more than just pumping iron. Students are expected to run and do exercises also.

Business education: practical, vocational

By Jeff Bridges

Students interested in any office work had many courses from which to choose. The Business Department had classes ranging from accounting to typing and shorthand.

Accounting, a two-semester course opened to juniors and seniors, was designed to provide the necessary skills in double entry bookkeeping.

Business Law and Business Principles were one-semester courses which explored aspects of business operations and legal principles. Business Law went into more detail in the areas including contracts, buyer and seller, debtor, creditor, employer and employee insurance, property and business operations.

In Business Principles the student learned that more than just facts make a business successful. The student was guided in the development of his own powers of judgement.

Typing I taught students to operate the keyboard by touch and develop speed and accuracy in the use of the typewriter. Typing II was vocationally oriented to develop a salable skill for students who need typing proficiency to fulfill their career objectives.

Shorthand developed the ability to take dictation at a rapid rate, followed by accurate transcription.

Principal Robert Hendricks creates Squash Blossom necklace for his wife.

Principal makes jewelry for leisure enjoyment

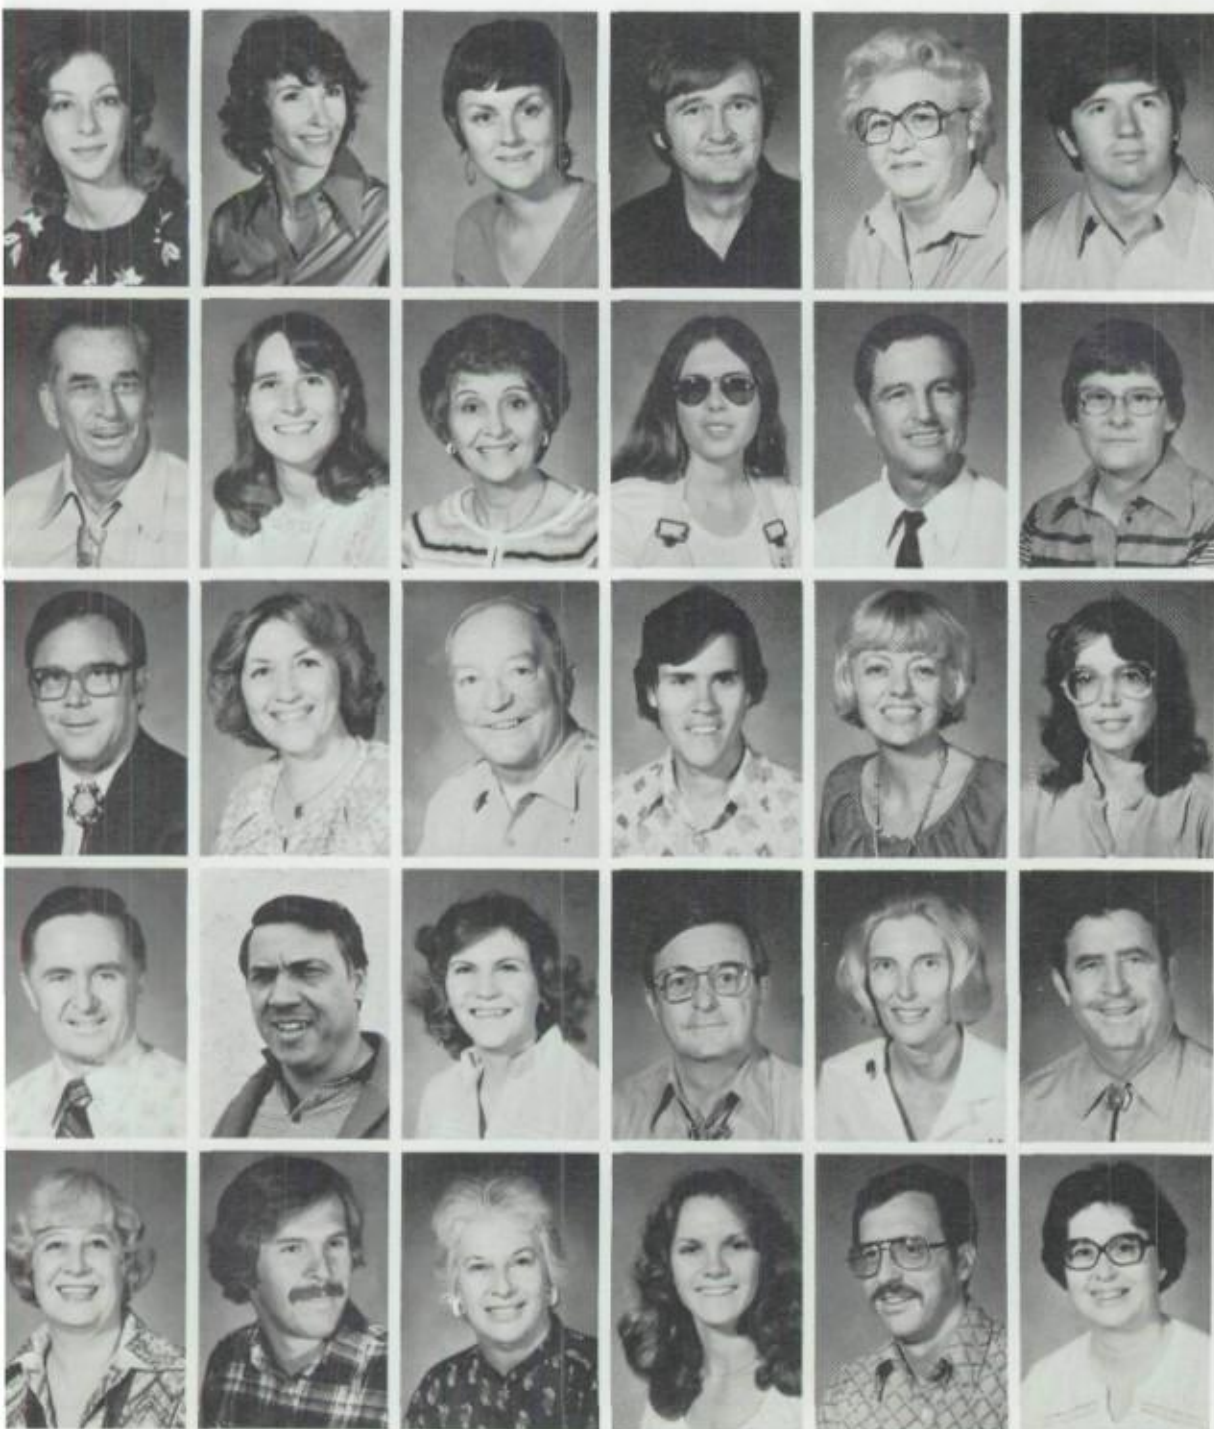

By Marisa Latta

Jewelry making, one of the oldest trades on record, is the spare-time hobby of Principal Robert Hendricks. "I found this to be a fun and relaxing hobby," he said.

Hendricks makes basically Indian-design jewelry, but he also has done some sculpture. He creates jewelry by lost wax method but doesn't like it because "you can work for several days on a piece of jewelry that may not even turn out right." He prefers the sandcasting method, which involves carving out a piece of sandstone.

Hendricks makes the jewelry to sell when people request it. A bracelet or ring may run about $20, a bola tie about $80, and a Squash Blossom necklace up to $1,000.

Hendricks said he is "self-taught," learning from experience, not a text book. He started by watching the crafts teacher when he was vice principal at Saguaro. He also spent some time on the reservation observing the Indians.

EVERYTHING
WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT ...

ORGANIZATIONS

You won't find some of the organizations you're expecting to see here. We've moved several things like the bands, choruses, chess and speech clubs to the Competitions section.

We in no way want to suggest that they are a sport, but they aren't a club either. We moved them solely for the one thing they have in common with the other events in school, they compete for recognition, titles, and awards.

To be a member in service clubs such as Los Hermanos, its auxiliary LHA, Amicae, and Criada, you have to be initiated. When this happens, you're kidnapped and made to come to class in your pajamas. Or on another day, you may wear a bathing suit over your school clothes. You could be a Martian or a bunny. You never know.

There are other clubs, honorary clubs, such as the Thespians. The honorary clubs require certain achievements prior to joining. To be a Thespian you have to be active in several plays and other theatrical productions. Others may require you being in the top five percent of your class, like National Honor Society.

This section will tell you all about these service and honorary clubs. This section will tell you "Everything you Ever Wanted to Know about Organizations" at CHS. Read it carefully, you may want to join one of these groups.

Amicae: survival of the fittest

By Jenni Curtis

Amicae is a girls service club made up of juniors and seniors. Once a member survives initiation week, the only requirement for being in Amicae is a payment of $5 each semester.

When girls are initiated, they are kidnapped early in the morning and taken to the Civic Center for breakfast. For the rest of the week they must wear a sign that reads "I'm a new Amicae Chick," dress up in different ways, and bow to full-fledged members.

Amicae held an annual Spirit Breakfast day of the Homecoming football game. It boosted school spirit and made money for the club. Football players were honored guests, and others paid 50 cents for the breakfast of juice and donuts.

Amicae sponsored the King and Queen of Courts ceremonies during the basketball season. Toni Quijada and Bret Godfrey were crowned King and Queen at halftime during the Coronado-Mt. View basketball game, Feb. 2.

The club's sponsor was Diana Seaman, learning resource teacher. Amicae also sponsored a Mexican girl the full year through Father Wasson's Little Brothers organization. They are called "Friends of the Little Children."

DECA develops future business leaders

By Jenni Curtis

Distributive Education of America (DECA) gives students a chance to enter the business world and develop their skills in marketing and distribution.

DECA members work on the job in various places of their choice, such as the National Shirt Shop, Lonnegan's, B.B. Singer's, Wildlife Studio, and Garcia's Del Este.

DECA members have to be seniors and be accepted into distributive education.

DECA held a racquetball tournament and sold concessions at football games among other activities.

The members of DECA were involved in civic contributions and developed their vocational leadership, and social skills.

DECA has been in existence at Coronado since the 1962-63 school year. The national DECA program was started in the 1920's. There are more than 70 chapters of DECA in the state of Arizona.

Officers of DECA for the year were Kirk Fiehler, president; Jaime Berry, vice-president; Ed Krutel, treasurer; and Brenda Niles, secretary.

"Good morning Coronado! This is the KCHS morning news," is what the Announcers Club is known for. The club reduced the daily news broadcasts from five to only three times a week. The teachers felt that the announcements were taking away too much time from second hour classes.

The only requirement for membership in Announcers club is a voice audition.

Los Hermanos is Coronado's big brother

By Chris Boillot

Los Hermanos (Big Brother) for fifteen years has served the school and community. They ushered at football games and fine arts events and held a Big Brothers picnic. A MDA Bowl-a-thon and a fund raising for Scottsdale's sister city, Alamos, Mexico, were other events.

LH together with Thespians, sponsored the annual Christmas dance. LH sponsored with LHA, a Christmas party at the Arizona Training Center for the Children's Colony. LH's motto is "Service for school and city."

Los Hermanos Auxiliary (LHA) has been a separate club from Los Hermanos for six years. LHA was set up as a service club for Coronado and the community; they attempt to build spirit and pride.

LHA held a rummage sale for the Coronado book fund and reupholstered the homecoming throne. During Homecoming Week, the club decorated the windows and the lawn.

Cross Country Club honors all runners

Story and Photos by Judy Hegarty

The Cross Country Club satisfied the thirst of both boys and girls cross country runners. They boosted spirits, gave moral support, and passed out place cards. These were the purposes of the club. Requirements for membership were coming to the meetings and participating in extra activities.

Raising money was essential to fund the club's projects. They sold Coke at one cross country meet and held a rummage sale at Park-n-Swap. The funds bought ice and cups to serve the Coronado runners, as well as art supplies to make posters.

"We've worked real hard this year," said Sandy Schoenhofen, vice president. "Even though our membership declined a great deal, we still gave the teams a lot of support."

Several of the runners themselves were active in the club - Mark McIntyre, Bill Gordon, David Reed, Randy Martens, Kirk Fiehler, Les Shipman, and Gary Cawthorne.

Choral Lettermen support vocal music involvements

By Judy Hegarty

"Choral Lettermen Club stimulates the whole choral program," said president Craig Smith, junior. "Most choral festivities were planned through Choral Lettermen."

Candidates for the club must first have achieved membership in one of the three varsity choirs. Points toward membership were accumulated by auditioning for a school musical or an all-state group, attending a concert, or attending other choral activities. Participants had to be present at meetings, practices and choral-related events.

Activities by the club raised funds that sent Coronado's best singers, the Advanced Choral Ensemble (ACE) on a tour to Disneyland. They visited other places in California to perform and observe fine arts programs.

Other club involvements include sponsoring ACE in a ten-hour sing-a-thon, the annual ACE Christmas carols, and hosting a continental breakfast for the alumni who return annually to sing at the Christmas assembly.

Staffers produce 18th book

The Coronado yearbook staff worked hard to produce the eighteenth Trail yearbook. Even with a different publisher and harder deadlines, the book made it to the plant and back to the students. The staff was under more pressure to meet the deadlines to qualify for a free spring supplement.

At deadline time it was a usual routine for staffers to leave classes, work all day and straight through the night, to watch the sunrise the next morning. They claim that "Jack-in-the-Box" and "That's Italian" get more than half their income from Trail; McDonald's too, and Dunkin' Donuts, Straw Hat, Wendy's, Gino's ... (That's all one day!)

When asked what her one wish for the Trail was, Karyn d'Eon replied, "Electric typewriters." She was seconded by Mila Clift and the motion was carried through, SOOOOO, Mr. Johnson?

Maureen McSpadden said the most important thing she got out of the Trail was, "The screaming strengthened my vocal chords." Did she lose anything?

"My family and about 20 pounds."

"My daughter keeps nagging me to come home," said advisor Gerri Fiedler. "There were times when I felt I'd have to set up a cot and kitchenette in the 'goody room.'"

Yearbook is a perfect example of Murphy's three laws: Nothing is as easy as it looks; everything takes longer than you think; if anything can go wrong, it will.

"Working on the yearbook and with these people is an experience I'll never forget!" said Sherry Davis, classes editor.

As the second deadline drew to a close, the journalism room was hit with a snow fight, courtesy of Sherry Davis.

"This is the hardest working, most conscientious, creative, and capable staff I have ever worked with," said Fiedler. "And that even means photos."

Explorer plans to improve All-American class rating

By Jenni Curtis

The Explorer newspaper got some new staffers and a new flag to start the year off.

Even with the new staffers, the staff was still small which caused them to work even harder to get an issue out.

Casey Moore, editor, feels the paper has improved. "We're not as afraid as previous staffs to express our own opinions and to let the students on campus express theirs," Moore said. "Our sports section has become more interesting and personal, our news has become more complete, and our features more inspired. Of course, we do have a few problems."

The newspaper had very little money, which caused delay in publications. The advertising staff was small, so it was hard for them to get money.

"It is very difficult for me, after all the work I put into the paper, to see it lying on the ground or in the bottom of some garbage can. But as a responsible periodical, we owe it to the public to continue publishing," stated Moore.

Last year's second semester Explorer was rated All-American by the National Scholastic Press Association (NSPA) from the University of Minnesota.

Skiers learn essential skills on dry land

By Jenni Curtis

The Dons Ski Club went on trips to Purgatory, Durango, Telluride, and Sunrise ski resorts.

The purpose of the organization was to promote downhill and cross country skiing, to physically condition students, and to encourage new friendships and beneficial high school activities.

A person does not have to be a skier to join Ski Club or to go on the ski trips. Hikers go along for the beauty of the snowy mountains. Some even go just to play in the snow and slide down the hills on their innertubes.

Club meetings were filled with first aid instructions, Ski Patrol rescue information, educational films, and dryland ski lessons with speakers.

The dryland ski lessons instructed the members on how to put on ski boots and what size skis and poles to use. They were also taught special toe exercises to prevent cramping of the toes while skiing.

A one dollar discount on trips was given to members for every hour they spent on projects such as pretzel, candy, and rummage sales.

To be a member of the Dons Ski Club, students have to pay a $5 membership fee and be a Coronado student in good standing. The $5 fee went towards a discount on trips.

The club was chartered in 1975 with 40 members and a good snow year. The club members won trophies at Sunrise and Purgatory ski areas in downhill slalom races. In 1977 Sandy Neddermeyer topped state women downhill skiers, while the men garnered five bronze medals and four trophies.

Photographers serve publication staffs

The Coronado Trail Photographers were spending most of their time in a small, light proof, strong-smelling domicile, correctly named the darkroom.

The darkroom, located in the journalism room (500 building), consists of 4 enlargers, 6 cameras, and 11 photographers.

"Throughout the year the photographers were subjected to sub-human working conditions and were plagued by hardships," said Randy Schmid, head photographer for the Coronado Trail.

"Even with a limited budget, the photographs turned out very well," Jesse Valenzuela said. "The color this year also turned out very well." Photographers developed slides in the darkroom using the E-6 process. Many of the slides were used in the color section of the '79 Trail.

Three beginning photography classes shared the darkroom throughout the year.

Top scholars are elite club

The National Honor Society (NHS) is an academic society for outstanding students. The members include the top 2 percent (academically) of sophomores, top 10 percent juniors, and top 15 percent seniors. Students remain members throughout their first year of college.

One of the club services is to tutor other high school students in academic subjects. Pretzel sales and car washes were some of the fund-raising activities, which were held to provide scholarships and awards.

"Working with our intelligent sponsors, Mr. Hughes and Mr.

Club encourages international communication

Story By Michele Courtney
Photos by Alan Bateman

International Club is a group that makes people aware of different languages. This awareness increases tolerance for differences in people. The club's goal is to improve communication and conversation with others from different lands. It is not only on a personal level that knowledge and understanding of foreign languages is important, but also in the career and business world.

While at meetings, members viewed movies and listened to speakers. They organized money-raising events and held annual soccer games. At picnics foods from different nationalities were sampled. The group dined at several different restaurants to get a taste of international foods. Each member brought a foreign dish to a Christmas pot luck dinner.

The foreign exchange students were hosted by members of the club.

A foreign language career week was held in November. Representatives from the French Council, Motorola, Good Samaritan Hospital, U.S. Army, Arizona Government, Drug Enforcement Agency and the airlines talked about their careers.

In January the group visited elementary schools to encourage eighth grade students to enroll in a foreign language class. In the spring the club sponsored a French contest.

"We've really got a great bunch of people together this year," said International Club President Lori Rothschiller. "Our membership list is larger than it's been in years, and I think that's due to an increase in sponsor participation, enjoyable activities and student interest and cooperation.

Pep Club is a spirit and support club for athletics and special events.

On game days the members wore blue shirts that read "Pep Club." Their moto was the "Pep Club Peppers." The club painted 155 posters for various athletic games, besides publicity for special events.

Selling pretzels and holding bake sales raised money for shirts and paint.

There were 63 members in the club this year. "The club attendance was pretty stable," says president Jamie Fritzlen. The club won third place for window painting during Homecoming week. They helped clean the campus all year.

The Pep Club didn't sell much at the games because as Jamie Fritzlen commented, "We were needed for cheering."

The club was established in 1976 by '78 graduate Brian Peach.

Wild Arizona mountains attract Hiking Club

Story and Photos by Judy Hegarty

Hiking Club went on more hikes than in the past two years. They went on day-hikes to Horton Springs, Beaver Creek, and Squaw Peak to get their legs in good condition. Then they went backpacking to Mazatzel Peak, Superstition Mountains, and Sycamore Canyon for a few days on several occasions.

Members were required at all times to show concern and respect for nature. Membership dues helped cover some of the expenses. The club gave beginning hikers background skills and information. Experienced hikers had the opportunity to use their already acquired skills.

Meetings included demonstrations of equipment and supplies such as sleeping bags, daypacks and backpacks etc. Survival training included health & safety hazards and first aid.

COE is: Club, class, on the job training

By Jenni Curtis

Cooperative Office Education (COE) is a combination of a class and a club. COE has the features of a classroom and advantages of on-the-job-training. This coordinates the students' classroom activities with the job to enhance their strengths and improve their weaknesses in office skills.

The club portion of COE is to develop managerial and organizational skills. Students work in all areas of office-related occupations, insurance companies, doctors offices, and industrial legal companies are examples.

The students receive three semester-hours credits that go towards graduation—two hours for on-the-job-training and one for school. They are also being paid and work regular office hours, one o'clock to five o'clock. This allows the student to hold a job that does not occupy evening hours.

Jerry Smith is the club sponsor. Besides conducting the on-campus classes, Smith observes the field experience out in the community.

In its first year, the Coronado Aviation Club had fifteen members. Although one of the smallest clubs on campus, it had several big trips, the Pima Air Museum, and Marana.

Senior Mark Jones, founder and president of Aviation Club, said "Sponsor Nathaniel Hathaway has been very cooperative in arranging field trips and outings." Jones hopes the organization increases in size in the years to come.

The club was founded to better serve the students interested in the field of Aviation and to broaden their horizons in the area.

Service, social activities sponsored by Criada girls

By Judy Hegarty

During homecoming week, Criada sold carnations and painted a window in the 100 building. They were judged first place for their window design. They also decorated a cafeteria window, painted posters, and decorated the football stands.

All proceeds from fund raising activities went towards their annual Sweetheart Prom. It was held at Ramada East on Feb. 3. "Finding a place was a bear, but it went well and I was very pleased with their service," said President Lisa Ware, senior, of the hotel facilities.

High membership was due to the endurance of initiation and interests in the community and school service club.

Amateur radio captures invisible waves

Story and photos by Judy Hegarty

"I have never contacted any hostile people on my radio," said Amateur Radio Club President Richard Noll, freshman. "When I work with my radio I tune out the world, only to tune in the world."

Amateur Radio was a new club started by Noll and sponsor Ray Roswick, electronics teacher. Students develop their interests in "ham" (amateur) radio by learning the principles of electronics.

Before ham radio operators can air they must pass a test and receive a license required by the Federal Communication Commission (FCC). Morse code and electronic theory are areas covered.

The club's goal was to get all of the members licensed. Practice enabled them to use advanced techniques like radio-teletype, television and satellite communication.

There are about 700,000 ham radio buffs all around the world. Many occupations revolve around radio operating such as weather or public service, station disc jockey, and airport traffic control.

Art brightens campus image

Story and photos by Judy Hegarty

Art Club (Bellas Artes) consists of only ten members, but they have made a lot of progress. They put up a Christmas display in Los Arcos Mall and have completed the cafeteria mural which has been unfinished since it was begun in 1975. Art Club's main objective was to provide culture through art to students. Murals, mosaics, and sculpture were the medias used.

Membership requires participation in an art class. The club earned $100 by designing a Christmas display at Los Arcos Mall. They received $1,000 from the Mall officials, but materials cost about $900.

"Art is just one form of self expression," said President Laura Ramson, senior, "but everyone exhibits his feelings in different constructive ways."

'Young Life is for anyone,' stresses leader

Story by Linda Coulson

What is Young Life? That is a question frequently asked by students around campus.

On the surface, Coronado's Young Life seemed to be a rowdy group of high school students who met together every Monday night to sing songs, participate in skits and generally "have a good time." But underneath, the difference in Young Life was that students also heard about the word of Jesus Christ.

Young Life was led by eleven individuals, mostly college-age and mostly graduates of Coronado.

"Young Life is really a hard thing to define," said Don Worcester, one of the leaders. "There are many things Young Life is definitely not, though. It is not a 'religious' club, and it's not a church club. It's just a group of high school students who are involved in meeting other students."

Coronado students are not the only ones who attend Young Life clubs. High school students nationwide attend meetings held at their own schools.

"At Young Life we don't present a religion, but try to present a person," Worcester continued. "That person obviously being Jesus Christ."

The atmosphere at club is relaxed and casual, rather than structured. Worcester said that the aim is to let the student evaluate for himself "the greatest personality of all time."

Young Life has no official membership. "You don't join, you just come," explained Worcester. "A lot of people make the mistake that you have to be a 'Christian' to come. That's not it at all. Young Life is for anyone!"

In an effort to raise the attendance at meetings, Worcester offered to eat a live goldfish at club as soon as 100 people came and to shave his legs from the knee down as soon as attendance reached 200 people. Both promises were carried out.

"The growth has been amazing," commented Noreen Nadolsky, another leader. When I first started as a leader 6 years ago, there were about 25 kids coming regularly."

Mary Menosky, sophomore: "I feel that Young Life has helped me to get along better with other people."

Mary Zertuche, sophomore: "I feel that Young Life's changed my whole life for the better; it's just great."

Kris Rapp, freshman: "Becoming a Christian was really special to me. It's not only brought me closer to God, but closer to a lot of new friends."

Jinny Cordova, freshman: "It's become a big experience in my life. Young Life is like one big family to me."

Phil Hawk, junior: "It's not a religion. It's a fellowship with a lot of other Christians."

Todd Anselmo, junior: "We're a rowdy group, but I think the best thing about Young Life is the camps."

Career Club, formerly Medical Career Club, was reorganized to cover the whole span of career possibilities.

"The Medical Career club was lacking in interest, so at the suggestion of the kids, we decided to include all career interests," commented Roberta Gallagher, career education aide and club co-sponsor. The club is also sponsored by English teacher Sandra Marquardt.

The purpose of the club was to point students in the direction of a career. Students found an area of interest and then went to the Career Center (located in the guidance office) and explored the possibilities of the interest. The Career Center has on file information on the amount and type of education needed, job openings and related careers for any job interest. The student can also find out if they "have what it takes" to fit the job.

At the meetings, students listened to guest speakers, such as an air traffic control pilot from Scottsdale Airport. The club visited the airport and the Arizona State University engineering department to observe on-the-job situations.

Members also learned how to act in an interview and how to fill out applications and resumes. Other inside tips relating to finding and holding down a job were offered by the sponsors.

"All this is to give the students an edge on finding a job in a world where many people will be competing for the same position," concluded Gallagher.

Field work in community part of HERO class/club

Story by Sherry Davis

"HERO (Home Economic Related Occupations) is a co-curricular club whose goal is to develop leadership, fellowship and community awareness," stated Alice Williams sponsor.

Selected students were allowed to enroll in the third hour HERO course. Fifteen working hours a week, out in the field in the chosen career area, were required of enrollees. Two school credits were issued for the club-class.

Of the twenty members, ten occupations were represented. Laurie Closset, Remco De'bruin, Lynette Jaquay, Denise Joseph, Pam Leighton, John Lynch, and Elana Viliborghy had a job in food services; Jo'l Brence, Jan Hreha, Sheryl Manske, and Jackie Mettile had occupations relating to fashion; Jodi Martin and Shelly Nichols had jobs in accessories. Patricia Blier was in housekeeping; Jane Durkin, interior design; Korri Foster, receptionist; Christine Koffman, child care; Koni Lewis, fabrics; Tammera Stegall, childrens' shoes; and Kathleen Tarico, dietetics.

The club sold stuffed basketballs and footballs, cook books and fruit cakes for fund-raisers. The money paid for members to go to the conferences support of the community project, and the yearend employee banquet.

Cheering changes Mat Maids' approach

Story by Sherry Davis

Leading cheers at the wrestling meets was an added function of Mat Maids, the girls auxiliary for the wrestling teams.

Along with their cheering activity Mat Maids kept score, sold concessions, painted posters and brought food for the wrestlers.

There were 22 Mat Maids and 3 sponsors Cheryl Steiner Boyer, Noni Campbell and Barbara Moore.

To raise money, the club sold tickets to the Japanese-Arizona Wrestling Meet and had a rock-a-thon at McDonalds. Members solicited sponsors who paid a pledged amount for every hour the girls rocked in their rocking chairs. The money was used to send wrestlers to camp.

"I think we've accomplished a lot this year, due to the fact that the girls really worked hard to create an atmosphere of pride and spirit at the wrestling meets," said Jody Paetz, club president, "Having such a great team also helped to boost spirit!"

Us

The purpose of our section is to get every student's picture in the book. But this is sort of boring, if that's all there is to it. So we've decided to return the student features.

You will find several different kinds of features here. One is the opinion survey. With the help of our sister publication, the EXPLORER, and the beginning journalism class we have printed the actual feelings of many Coronado students (in their own words) about things involving US. Another new idea here is the in-depth feature. You'll discover things about Coronado and it's people you never knew before. Have you ever wondered what Coronado is like to a foreign exchange student? Or what the fallout shelter looks like? You'll find out in the next few pages. You will also find out about your class officers—who they are and what they've done for you. These students work hard to make their class the best. They represent US.

This section is US; it wouldn't be a section if it weren't for YOU.

Tea for twins; twins for tea

Interviews by Lisa Grizzard

What's it like being a twin? That question was asked of the twelve sets of twins contacted at Coronado.

Patricia and Susan Bradley say it gets hectic; Edmund and Kathy Pickett say it's cool and they like it.

The Johnson twins, Mike and Teresa, said some people think twins grow farther apart, but they've grown closer together. Are twins better known because there are two of them? Only one set, the Jobs, said "No" to this question. Twins are popular, but there can be problems. "A lot of people don't realize that you are two different people," said the Bradshaws.

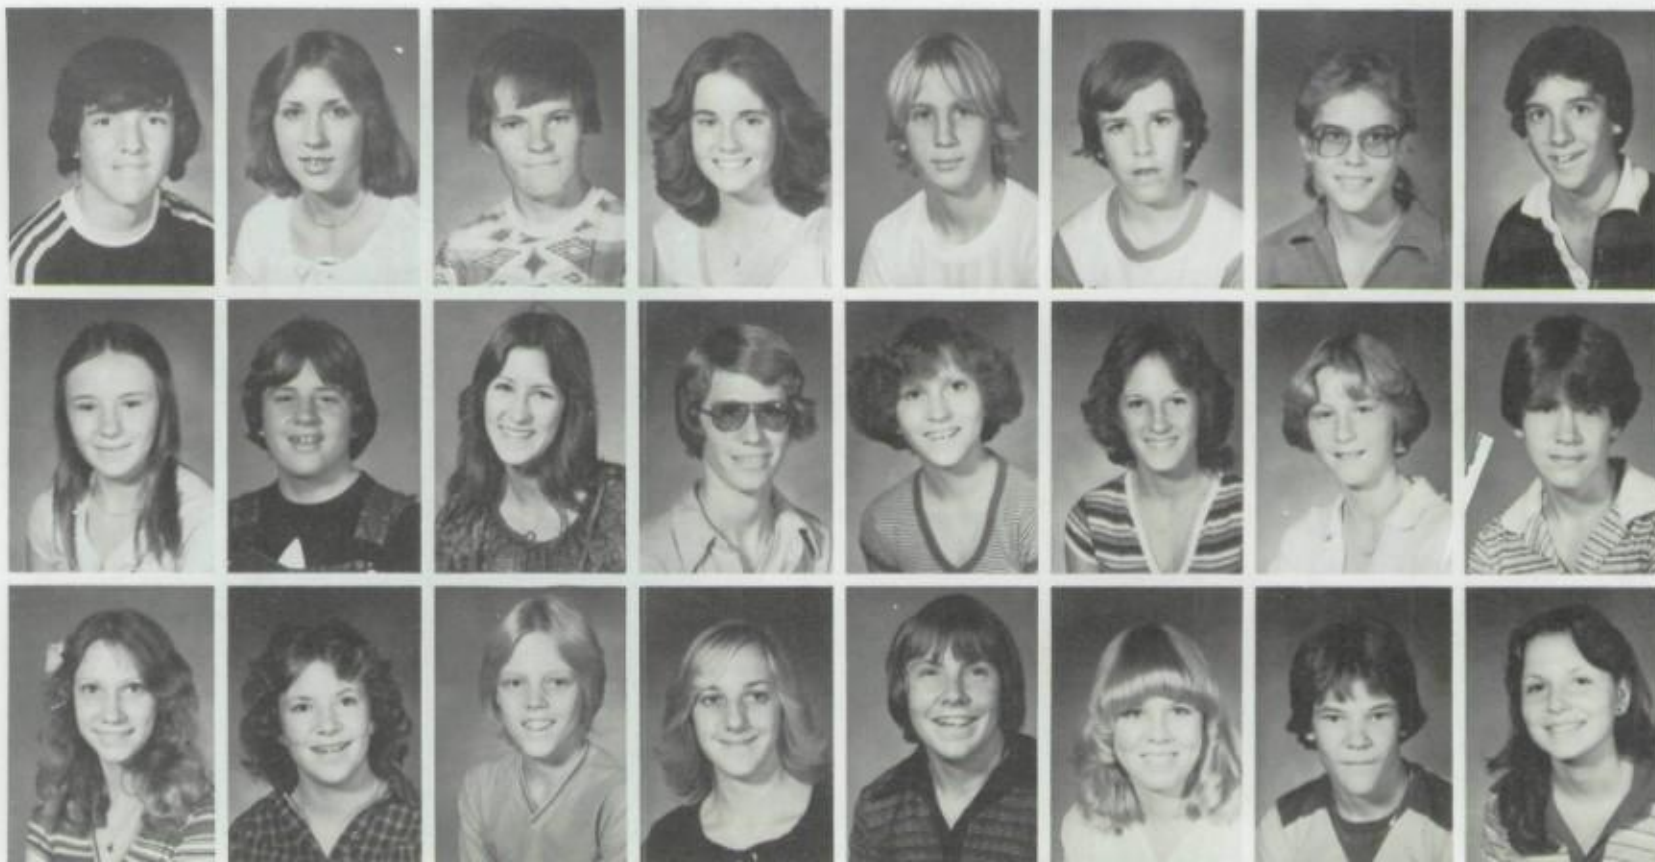

Out of the twelve sets of twins, only three sets are identical—the Wards, Bradshaws and Rileys. When the Bradshaws switched classes, they fooled the regular teachers but not the substitutes; when the Wards switched classes, the teachers didn't know the difference.

Freshmen: Is Coronado what you expected it to be?

Interviews by Brian Blake

"Yes, I visited Coronado last year with my eighth grade class."

"Yes, I have a sister who used to go to Coronado."

"Yup, my friend is a junior."

"Sure, my mom works here."

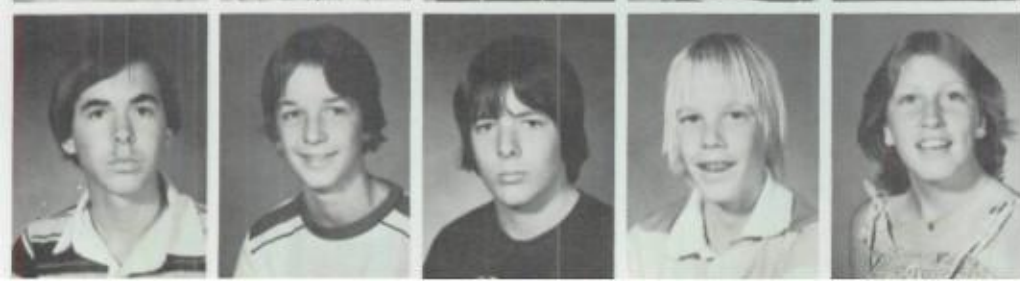

The answers were all the same—"yes." A student who graduated from college, Sandy Blake, was asked if Coronado was what she had expected it to be.

"Yes," she replies, and she gave the exact same reasons as the class of '82.

"Explorer" newspaper?

Interviews by John Splaine

How do you feel about the Coronado Explorer?

"There should be more about good concerts (rock). There should be more coupons and more polls to get opinions on certain rules and regulations."

"There should be more articles on sports. Interviews should be conducted with jocks from each sport. There should be more about the students in general."

"The articles should be aimed more toward the students' comprehension. There ought to be more comedy."

"It's a good newspaper. A good way to get information."

"I like to read it; it's very informative."

Ditching: Right or wrong, it happens

By Holli Stratton

At Coronado we have had so many opinions about the big problem which is—ditching.

There are some people that are all for it and some against it and some that just stay neutral. We have been taking people's opinions on ditching—here are a few reactions.

"I think that it is all right every now and then."

"I'm not for it. You gotta get out of class every once in a while."

"Occasional ditching is all right."

"It would be all right if you could get away with it."

"I really don't think it's necessary."

"Once in a while is okay but just don't get carried away with it."

Now some of these are one sided. Most of the people say what they feel about themselves and their situations. Some people are strong enough to admit it is called the campus cop out!

Coronado Kiosk stands at the heart of campus.

Security versus students: That was the question

How do students at Coronado feel about the Security Guards here on campus?

"They're no good, a waste of time and the school's money."

"If I had my way, there would be none."

"I think that they stink."

"I think that when you're high school age you should be responsible enough to handle things yourself."

"It's like a prison here. We're getting more and more like Saguaro High School."

On the other hand there are those students who feel different.

"I never do anything wrong, so I don't know."

"I don't know because I'm not at school long enough for them to bother me."

"I think we should have them because somebody has to handle all the chaos that goes on around the school."

Do teachers influence you and the way you think?

Interviews by Marisa Latta

"Yes, because a major part of your day and your youth is spent with teachers."

"A teacher contributes to the growing or stifling of a student's character because of their position in society."

"I feel I've gained a little from every teacher I've had."

"Yes, my life. No, not my opinions."

"Yeah, they are sort of like mind-molders. The problem is, you learn something one way, then the next year your new teacher says that it's wrong. I can't figure out what's right from what's just his opinion."

"Influence my life? Well sure, somewhat. They're older and have all those neat words of wisdom that they stole from someone else."

Discover fallout mystery in underground shelter

By Michele Courtney

Students were asked what they wanted to know about Coronado but were afraid to ask. Several wanted to know about the "fallout shelter."

It was used for civil defense during the Korean war and part of the Vietnam war, but hasn't been used as an emergency area for years. It is now used for maintenance purposes only.

The "fallout shelter" is a network of four foot wide passageways running in all directions beneath the campus. There is access to the underground shelter from all the buildings. The ceiling varies in height from five feet to six and a half feet. Rat poison is placed at intervals along the sand and gravel floors, to control rodents. The atmosphere is musty and dank, lighted only by occasional fixtures on the walls. Along one side of the wall are the electrical and telephone wires that operate the buildings above. The sewer and water pipes run along the other side. An occasional drip of water comes from the sprinklers above. Along the side of one of the tunnels are empty supply cans once used for survival supplies such as water, food, and first aid, reminiscent of the times when the shelter was stocked for emergencies.

Feelings about Coronado?

What are your feelings about Coronado?

"It's the No. 1 school in the world. That's all I can say!"

"Room for improvement."

"It's the best school you can possibly go to."

"Coronado's got a great English Department."

"Some things are good and others aren't."

"It's more spirited than the other schools I've been to."

"It's liberal, so that makes it bad."

"It's an o.k. school, but it could use improvement in the attendance office."

"It sure beats Antartica. My cousin was a penguin you know."

"The girls rooms need improvement."

"It's an O.K. school. It's got a good Theatre Arts department."

"I think it's a good school, except that you get lung cancer if you go in the restrooms."

Parking problems, solutions

Have you ever had a problem finding a good parking space at school? The parking lot has become not only too crowded but dangerous as well. Several comments were: "People always walk in front of the cars," "We need bigger parking facilities," and "The lots are too small and crowded; cars are getting scratched and hit."

Coronado is surrounded by houses, which means there is no available space. The danger of someone being hit, or possibly killed, could be solved if pedestrians would simply wait, instead of taking it for granted that cars will stop for them. Drivers could also avoid accidents in the parking lot by being more careful.

Junior class leadership active, involved

By Lori Borgeson

Junior President Ellen Rissi has been interested in school politics for several years. In eighth grade she was class president. From there, she became involved in Class Council during her freshman and sophomore years. She has also been an active member of the National Honor Society.

Vice President Larry Pellerito walked a familiar territory this year, as he has also been class vice president in his sophomore year. He was a member of the Freshman Football, Freshman Basketball, JV Football, and Varsity Football Teams. He has participated in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, also. He has been in Choralairs, JV Chorus, Choral Lettermen, and ACE. Other extra-curricular activities were Young Life, Key Club, and several school plays like "The Boyfriend," "The King and I," "The Crucible."

Linda Gaare, secretary of the Junior Class, was also class secretary in her freshman and sophomore years. Her musical background has been Choralairs, Freshman Prep Band, and Varsity Chorus. She was in the Cross Country Club both her freshman and sophomore years and on the Freshman Archery Team. Some of her other interests are Young Life, theatre and Club and Class Council.

Kathy Aitcheson has been class treasurer all three years. She was the assistant treasurer for the National Junior Honor Society in grade school. Some of her other activities include Ski Club, Club and Class Council and Catholic Youth Organization.

Jody Paetz was junior representative. During her freshman year she was vice president of her class, involved in LHA, and JV Band. While she was a sophomore, she was in Class Council, Cross Country Club, Mat Maids, Criada JV Band, and Marching Band. In the past year, she was active in Varsity Band, and Mat Maids president.

Being class Representative is "old hat" to Laurie Tanakaya, as she was also representative in sixth, seventh, and eighth grades at elementary school. In her freshman and sophomore years she was class president. Criada, Keyettes, LHA, Freshman Chorus, Freshman Tennis, and Marching Band were her other activities.

New officers help out with senior class

by David Virden

The '78-'79 Senior Class officers are a mixture of experienced veterans and newcomers to school politics. Selling "Hankercheers" was the main source of fund-raising for the class gift to the school and for the senior trip.

Wendy Davenport, senior president, said, "We hope to make our senior year at Coronado one we will remember." Last year Wendy was junior class president. Vice president Cathy Schlessman feels this year's seniors have participated more than usual in raising spirit at assemblies. Cathy was treasurer in both her sophomore and junior years.

Treasurer Missy Therrien had not held a class office before but had been active in service clubs and athletics. Becky Adams is class secretary. Her involvements with school activities until this year have been in the Fine Arts Department with membership in ACE and Choralairs.

Representative Bob Winkler said that the officers worked all year to leave the impression that the class of '79 was the best. Last year Bob was the junior class representative. Representative Kelley Ward's involvements around campus have prepared her for class representative. She has had parts in many theatrical productions, participating in choral groups and belongs to Criada and Young Life.

Are cars really important?

Interviews by Brenda Kennell

"In some aspects they are. But you don't especially need a car to get to school unless you live 10,000 miles away."

"I couldn't live without my tin box."

"Great! They're necessary. They're life."

"Yes, you can't go cruising without a car."

"Yeah, you can't go out on a date on bikes."

"Death traps!"

State predicted for football

Interviews by Jim Durkin

In the middle of the football season, several students were asked for their predictions.

"... all the way to state."

"... to the semi finals."

"I think they'll lose the championship game."

"They'll go to the finals."

"We're number one."

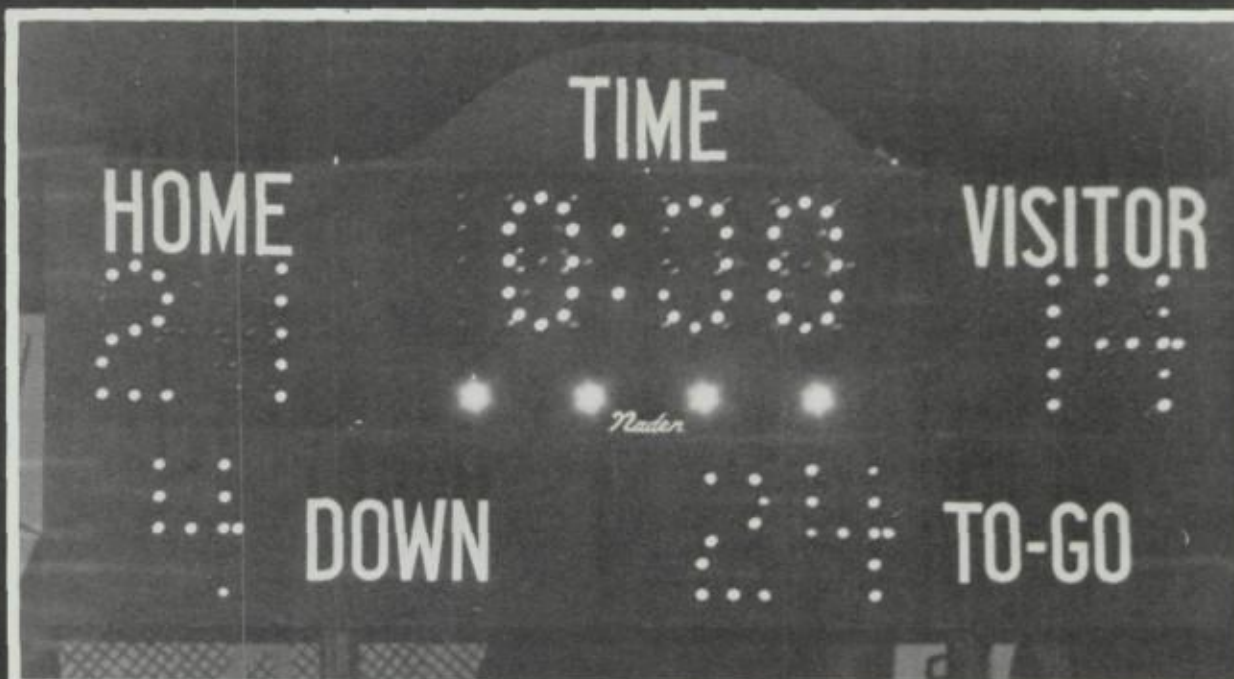

"Mountain View will probably beat us."

"If we can beat Westwood, we can beat anybody."

"I think we will lose to Amphitheatre in the state finals."

"13-1"

Mountain View took the State title on Dec. 8.

The final score of the football divisional playoffs between first-place A League Saguaro (Home) and second-place B League Coronado (Visitors) shows a Saguaro victory of 21-14.

Art teacher designs auditorium mosaic

Overlooking the north end of the campus mall is the large modernistic mosaic which decorates the face of the auditorium. Over 100,000 Venetian tiles were used for the project.

The work was created by art teacher Joseph Gatti, who first drew the design one-third the actual size in full color on graph paper. This was called the "comprehensive."

While the tile was on order, students divided the one-third size comprehensive into sections equivalent to one square foot on the finished mosaic, which was planned for 18 x 20 foot.

Students cut cardboard boxes into one foot squares. These were numbered to correspond to the numbering system Gatti had devised on the comprehensive. Each square was ruled off into three-fourths inch squares (the size of the tiles on order) to transfer the design from the comprehensive to the actual size which was drawn on the cardboard.

Following the colors and design on the comprehensive, and using regular school paste, art students glued the tiles face up onto the cardboard. Using water-soluble glue, sheets of special paper were then glued over the top of the tiles, thus creating the sandwich effect necessary for the final step of installation.

The following day, the school paste which held the tile to the cardboard had dried and crumbled, leaving the tile glued to the special paper. Students cleaned excess paste from the backs of the tiles and trimmed the ragged edges off the tile sections.

They were then placed permanently on the front of the auditorium by workmen pushing each square-foot section into wet cement. When the cement dried, the paper was removed with a little water. The entire mosaic was grouted, cleaned with acid and painted with a sealer to protect it from the weather.

The auditorium mosaic tells of fine arts at Coronado. Worth $10,000 when completed, it was created by art teacher Joseph Gatti for only $2,700. Photo by Schmid

College entrance requires ACT, ATP examinations

By Linda Coulson

ACT, SAT, ATP—What may sound like a bowlful of alphabet soup are actually college entrance examinations. Students are often puzzled about these tests, which are commonly required for college admission. These test scores are mandatory for use by applicants of 2,700 colleges.

The American College (ACT) and the Admission Testing Program (ATP), formerly the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), are the two major college entrance tests given in the Scottsdale high schools.

Seniors who were National Merit Scholars this year are Mariabeth Silkey, Chuck Gotlieb, Anne Marie Murray, and Lori Rothschilder.

The guidance counselors handle and advise students for the college entrance tests.

Foreign students exchange cultural ideas

Interviews by Maura Saavedra

Nora Peralta

Being a foreign exchange student to the United States became a reality for two students from other countries. Nora Peralta is from Concepcion, Chile and Lisbeth Petersen from Holte, Denmark.

Both girls were seniors.

To become exchange students these girls were selected on the basis of exams, interviews, health check-ups, personality tests and scholarship. "I was very excited when I found out I was coming to the United States," says Nora.

Nora was in the Hiking Club and the International Club. Lisbeth was in Los Hermanos Auxiliary and Young Life.

Nora's first hardship was when she missed her plane to Phoenix from Chicago, and she spoke no English. Things worked out when she found a Puerto Rican to explain and interpret for her.

Lisbeth had communication problems also. "It's a little bit difficult with the language," she commented.

Although they found the United States fascinating and very friendly, the girls became homesick. "I miss my family and home very much, but I find myself missing my mother the most." Nora commented on our country by saying, "In the U.S. everything is fast."

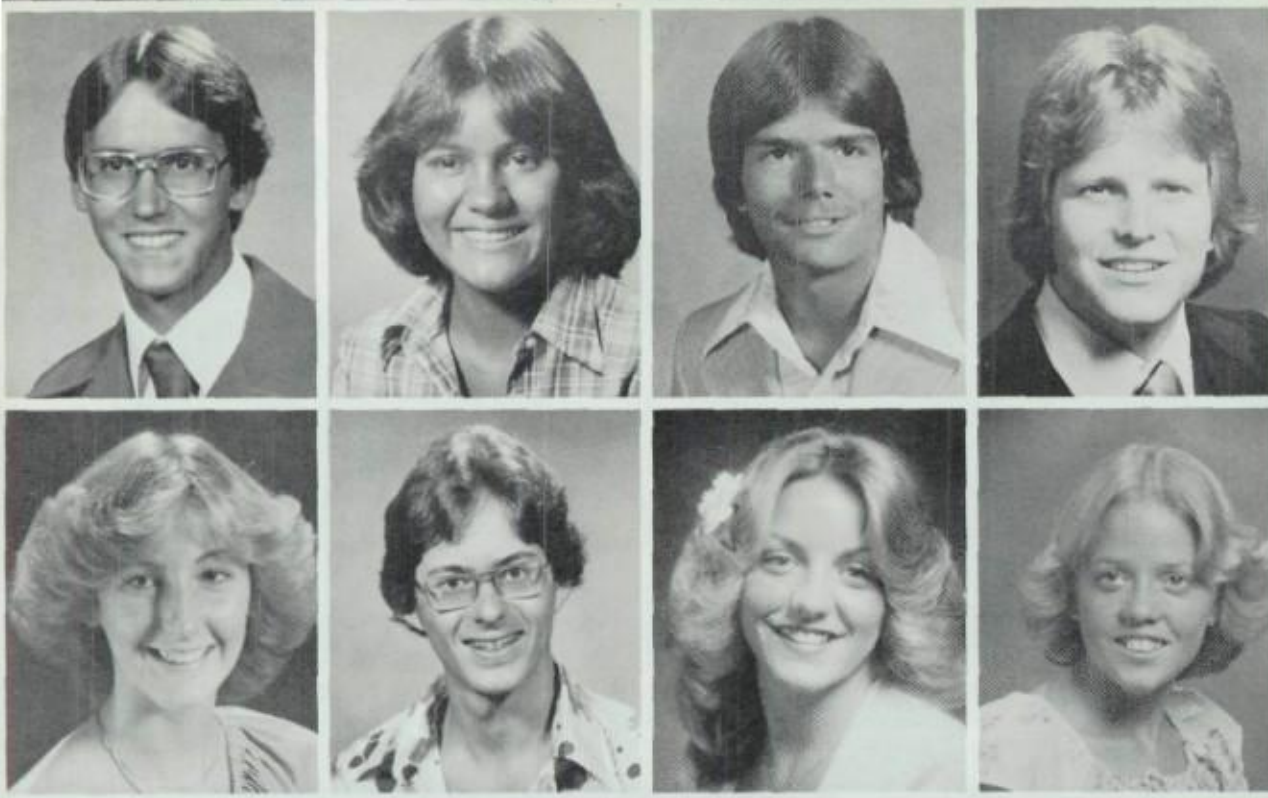

Lisbeth says, "Naturally I miss my family very much. I think it's terrible to think about going home."

Lisbeth enjoys the U.S. because "you can talk to everybody and the way you are friendly to each other."

Both students have found a great difference in dating practices to their countries. "In our country," said Lisbeth, "you can be at a party with a guy one night and the next day it's forgotten. You don't have to worry about seeing that guy again."

"Schools are more straight here than they are in Denmark," said Lisbeth, in comparing school systems.

"In my country, if we dislike the way a teacher is treating us or someone else, we can go up and tell him."

Nora enjoyed Coronado's school system. "I've been enjoying going to school here very much," she said. "In Chile a student must take the classes he is told to take which usually averages around fourteen classes a day." Students in Chile must attend classes on Saturdays.

Both girls find the U.S. laws different compared to where they're from. In Chile and Denmark, one must be 18 years old to get a driver's license.

"In Denmark a person can't be taught to drive by a relative or friend," says Lisbeth. "We have to be taught by a special teacher which usually charges about $20 an hour."

Nora misses the idea of being able to drink wine if you're a minor. "I was raised in such a manner that I miss being allowed to drink a little wine at dinner or when I have friends over."

Both girls enjoyed the weather here in Arizona. In Chile and Denmark there is much humidity and rainy weather.

Nora and Lisbeth both graduated with Coronado's seniors. They are leaving to their countries sometime during the summer. They plainly put it that they'll be sad to go.

Lisbeth Petersen

The girls came to the United States through a program called Youth For Understanding. Lisbeth resided with the William Sylvester family, who have also hosted former Coronado exchange students. Nora lived with Virginia Pellerin.

Food services offers hot nutritious meals

Like all food services in institutions, the snack bar and cafeteria came under criticism.

Peggy Nienaber, cafeteria manager, makes a special effort to provide hot, balanced, nutritious menus on campus.

In spite of convenience foods and frozen entrees, Coronado cafeteria still serves homemade soup, salads and breads and other things made with "tender loving care." Coronado was the only Scottsdale school that had a Thanksgiving dinner.

It was learned in an interview with Nienaber that the snack bar doesn't sell just junk food. It is stocked with natural food such as granola bars, nuts and fresh fruit including apples, bananas and oranges. Sandwiches and other nutritional foods are also served.

The snack bar was more crowded than usual because the windows were closed between classes.

Change in attendance draws unfavorable comment

Interviews by Jim Durkin.

How do you feel about the new attendance policy?

"It's unfair!"

"It stinks!"

"What new attendance policy?"

"They should give us more than four ditches."

"It's stupid!"

"They didn't need to tighten the attendance up."

"It's too strict!"

"You can't even go to the bathroom without getting stopped by the narc!"

"I hate it!"

"I never ditch anyway, so I don't mind it."

"They're getting carried away on this attendance business."

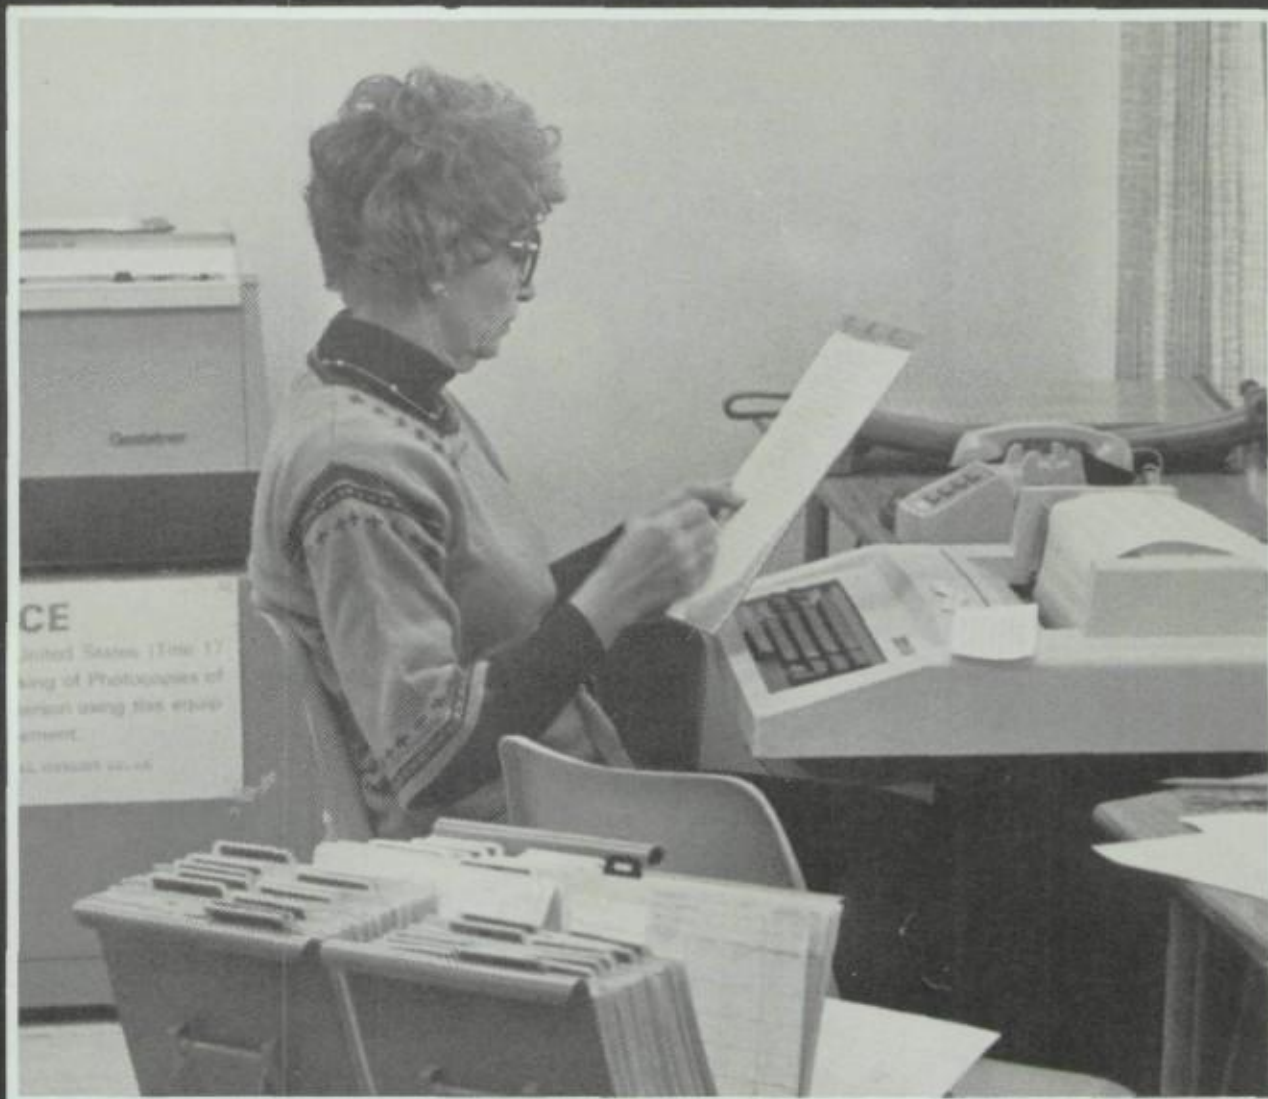

"I don't think it's working. Too many kids are getting dropped from class."

"It's totally stupid."

"I think it's too harsh."

"I doesn't bug me."

"I think it's impossible to enforce."

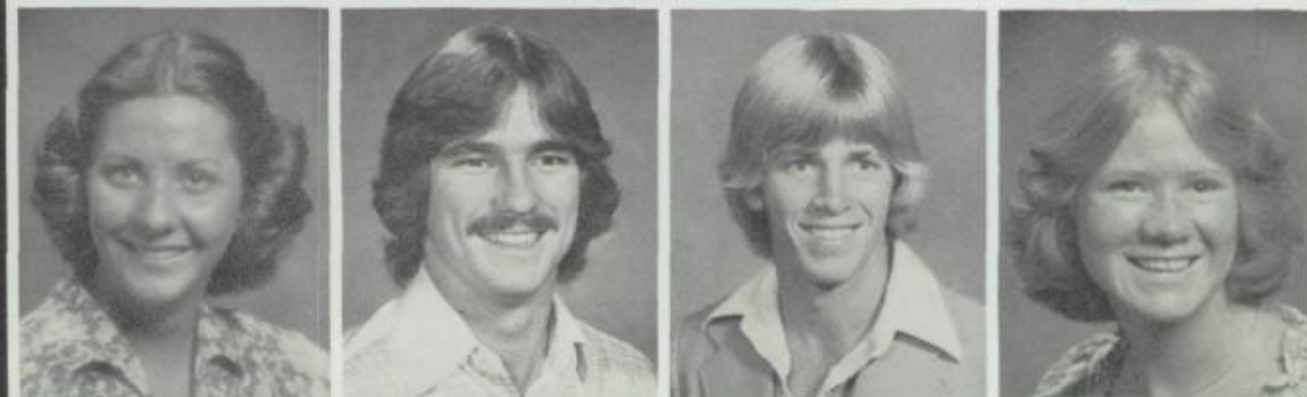

Clerk Jeane Harbertson feeds attendance information into the computer.

Josten's supplies students with traditional class rings

Class rings have long been high school status symbols and cherished mementos. The popularity of class rings waned in recent years due to the increased cost of gold and precious stones.

Josten's supplied Coronado with rings for the class of '79.

Over 100 personalized designs can be inserted beside the stone.

Prices range from $50-$125. Local jewelry stores around the city also sell a version of the class rings.

EVERYTHING
WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT ...

ON THE TOWN

Did you know that Coronado is the only Scottsdale high school to be in such a thriving, business-oriented district?

You may have never thought about it before, but do it now. To the immediate north is Frontier Plaza, and a little farther down the road are the Fifth Avenue shops and the Scottsdale Center for the Performing Arts. Then, to the west, you'll find good ol' McDonald's, LaBelle's, the Pizza Hut, plus many bookstores, used car dealers, and many more merchants.

On the south is our main shopping center, Los Arcos Mall, with its intriguing array of shops. Next to Los Arcos is Papago Plaza with Baskin-Robbins' 31 Flavors. Then, southeast, is Jack-in-the-Box, Burger King, Taco Bell, and K-Mart. What other high school in Scottsdale has all this in walking distance? None.

There's something relevant about your yearbook showing where you shopped and ate every day. And just think, 25 years from now, you may be living in Ringling, Montana. You can open up your TRAIL and see Scottsdale's McDonald's and you suddenly long for a Quarter Pounder with cheese. Maybe you'll even see yourself in the picture buying fries. You probably can't appreciate all this now. But you will.

Go on the town with us and you'll learn "Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Coronado's Business Community."

What do you think when you hear "Booster Club"? Jocks? Sports?

True, Booster Club does support the athletes of Coronado, but they also assist other activities. They helped buy outfits for the cheerleaders and sponsored club trips. Equipment and supplies were purchased for different groups on campus. Booster Club is for all of Coronado.

Membership fees for Booster Club are $1 for Coronado students and $2 for adults.

Why settle for a copy . . .

when Tangent gives you the original?

Why settle for an imperfect copy of your sound, when Tangent will give you the original?

Tangent's crystal-clear transparency allows your original sound to flow cleanly to the tape, with only the coloration that you add.

And beyond this foundation of solid quality, Tangent invites comparison on these features:

Automation

Automation from Tangent uses the innovative and widely-respected Allison 65K programmer and Fadex designs. Tangent chose the Allison system because it is the proven-in-the-field system.

VCA Grouping

For those not needing full automation, Voltage Controlled Amplifier (VCA) Grouping utilizes up to nine VCA groups, while other manufacturers normally use fewer.

Sub-Group Solo

Programmable Sub-Group Solo allows the engineer to solo an entire sub-group in place by pushing only one button. This convenience is not found in all competing VCA grouping or Automation systems.

Semi-Parametric EQ

Three-band sweepable frequency equalization on each channel is a standard Tangent feature. Not an expensive option as with some competing systems.

Transformerless Balancing

Transformerless Balancing keeps your original sound pure with incredible transient response. Noise is within 3 dB of the theoretical limit.

Transformerless Balancing is suddenly a big deal among the other console manufacturers. It should be. Tangent's been doing it for years.

16 Submasters

Tangent's 16 submaster busses plus "Direct" allow tremendous flexibility for 16 or 24-track work.

FET Switching

Electronic FET switching silently rearranges the signal flows for maximum convenience and minimum repatching.

Lots of Extras

Penny & Giles faders, multiple Echo and Cue send, Phase Reverse, Tape Return Gain, and many other features on each channel give full professional control and reliability.

Compare Tangent's features to consoles costing twice as much and you'll see what a value Tangent is.

As for comparing Tangent's quality, well, you just can't get better than the original.

Eddie Mosel, plant leader, cuts his 61st birthday cake at a party given in his honor in November.

ONE The Arizona skyline is shown during the floods of December. Two floods devastated several Arizona communities in 1978. Floods of their magnitude had never hit Arizona in recorded history.

TWO The old Tempe bridge hasn't been used since the opening of the Mill Avenue Bridge across the Salt River. During the floods of '78 all river crossings were closed or washed away except Mill Avenue and the freeway, and Central Avenue bridges.

THREE Jim Naegel, junior, the "Broken Leg Radical" demonstrates a "wheely" on his wheelchair. Naegel, broke his leg skiing in December.

FOUR The sun sets at El Dorado Park. The park is the scene for cross country meets, swim meets, reunions and many more school activities. El Dorado is also part of a long chain of parks used in Scottsdale's flood control system.

Coronado's eighteenth year comes to a close. If you've read carefully, you've learned things in this book that you'll find nowhere else. You've seen and read about your friends, teachers and yourself. You have a piece of history in your hands.

Forever locked away in this book are recordings of our world's events in 1978-79—Red China relations, peace talks and mass suicide. Close to home, you've seen current happenings at Coronado, in the Valley and the state. You've watched the development of a memorable year at CHS. The controversial attendance policy was a big surprise; the football team made a comeback; and our first girls cross country team took the title our boys have claimed for two years.

You've learned our school's history. Now you even know how many flags are on campus. We hope the TRAIL TRIVIA has informed you of a few insignificant facts and maybe made you smile.

High school is said to be the best time of your life. It may not have seemed that way at times; but looking back in the years to come, all those tears will make you laugh. We hope this book will bring back happy memories, then and now.

... a book I have made,
 The words of my book
 nothing,
 The drift of it everything,
 A book separate, not link'd with the rest
 Nor felt by the intellect,
 But you ye untold latencies
 Will thrill to every page.

Well, you've seen the book. I hope you enjoyed it and found something in it about yourself.

I've thought all year what I was going to say on this page. I wanted to go into some beautiful poetic words of wisdom. I can only wish that there was some way to express myself to the many friends that have supported me through my four years on the yearbook staff.

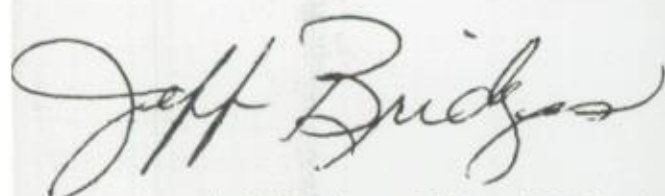

I would like to mention just a few very special people that gave me that little extra when I needed it.

They are Anita Mellius, MaryLou Kraus, Gwendolyn Riggle, Jeane Harbertson, Edna Peterson, Debbie Howell and a very special thanks to Mariam Wright, James Newcomer, John Hoge of Catalina High School in Tucson, Steve Carlson, of Arizona Western College in Yuma and Gerri Fielder who (very begrudgingly) stayed up with us into the twilight hours during our deadlines.

And then the best thanks to the '79 Trail staff for putting up with my moods and yelling. Believe me, I couldn't have done it without you all.

Take Care in your future endeavors and I hope you find as much happiness and satisfaction with life as I have.

Take Care,

Jeff Bridges. Editor '79 Trail

P.S. Oh yes, and most of all I would like to thank you Mr. Larry Halbert for starting me off right in journalism and yearbook. Heaven knows I wouldn't go into it as a carrer, but it has been an experience that I will always look back upon with a few fond memories and some personal satisfaction. Thanks!
